SENATORS PLAN FULL AIRING OF F.D.R.'S POLICY

Washington Echoes with Criticism.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—With official Washington echoing with criticism of the President's foreign policy as defined yesterday in the state of the union message, it became known tonight that administration and anti-administration leaders are preparing for a "full dress" debate of the subject at the next meeting of the senate on Wednesday.

Sen. Vandenberg.

Among those who will assail Mr. Roosevelt for sins of commission and omission in the political course he has pursued in European affairs are members of the foreign relations committee, including Sen. Vandenberg, [R., Mich.] and Sen. Shipstead [R., Minn.]. Sen. Connally [D., Tex.], chairman of the committee, will assume the burden of the defense of the President. Both Vandenberg and Shipstead today declined to comment on the message in advance of their speeches.

F. D. R. Outmaneuvered.

Most of the criticism voiced is to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt, in his message, virtually confessed having been outmaneuvered by British Prime Minister Churchill and Russian Dictator Stalin in carving up Europe into British and Russian spheres of influence at the expense of Poland, the Baltic states, the Balkans, Greece, Italy, and other small, defenseless nations. According to this criticism, the President's utterances boiled down into specious excuses for his failure to stand up to Churchill and Stalin for American principles.

The upshot of the message in the view of such critics is that Stalin is virtually given the green light to go right ahead appropriating the territory of Poland and other countries in eastern Europe and imposing communist governments upon them. The President says that the influence of the United States will be exerted to prevent a provisional government such as the Russian sponsored Lublin government of Poland, from obstructing eventual choice by the people of their form of government. But if our influence avails naught we should not blame Russia but hope that the new league of nations to preserve peace would "rectify mistakes which may be made," according to the President.

Defeat Like Wilson's.

Mr. Roosevelt is pictured as being defeated in European diplomacy as was Woodrow Wilson in Paris. Wilson also, when he failed to maintain his 14 points against the machinations of the French, British, and Italians, fell back upon the hope that his league of nations would rectify injustices. The hope proved a vain one.

Rep. Mundt [R., S. D.], a member of the house committee on foreign affairs, took Mr. Roosevelt to task for the attitude he displayed in the foreign policy section of the message.

"The President's definition of his

Green to Give Legislature Outline Today

BY GEORGE TAGGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 7. — Gov. Green is expected to inaugurate his second term tomorrow with a long message dealing with a score of subjects, including such controversial matters as a state constitutional convention, reapportionment of political districts, and Chicago's transportation and housing problems.

His address to the 64th general assembly will be the highlight of streamline ceremonies to induct state officers elected Nov. 7. Other Republicans taking the oath will be Lt. Gov. Cross, State Auditor Lueder, Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett, and Conrad F. Becker, newly elected state treasurer.

A Democrat, Edward J. Barrett, will take over the second most powerful state patronage office, that of secretary of state. Barrett today issued a good will statement promising coöperation with the G. O. P. officials "in every enterprise designed to further the general welfare of the people."

Question of "Con Con."

Gov. Green recently said the question of a constitutional convention deserved consideration, leading to speculation that he has been sold on the idea. Certain pressure groups, including the CIO and the League of Women Voters, have been agitating for "con con," as it is known in the state capitol.

In the 1943 session of the legislature Gov. Green gave help to a proposed constitutional amendment to permit reëlection of county treasurers and sheriffs, but none to a "con con" bill. The late Gov. Horner, Democrat, sponsored "con con" bills in several sessions.

General belief is that many promoters of "con con" are mainly interested in imposing a graduated state income tax. This cannot be done under the uniform taxation clause of the 1871 constitution.

Reapportionment Touchy.

The governor also will tread on dangerous ground in urging reapportionment of the senatorial and congressional districts. Shifts of population since the last districting in 1901 have given downstate a disproportionate number of seats in the legislature and in congress. Legislators since then have refused to carry out the constitutional requirement of changing the boundaries after each federal census.

Chicago's transportation muddle, also in the antique class, sets up another hurdle for Illinois' chief executive. He is expected to say he will be helpful, but just how is the question.

Slum clearance offers many knotty problems. Gov. Green said the other day that private enterprise can't do the job without the power of condemnation. That power was given by the Neighborhood Redevelopment corporation act of 1941 which is before the Illinois Supreme court.

Taxes to Remain.

His inaugural pronouncements on state taxation were forecast by Green a few days ago. State taxes must remain at present levels in order to meet higher operating costs and preserve the $116,000,000 surplus for post-war emergencies, he said.

Labor legislation to liberalize unemployment compensation benefits is apt to get a boost from the governor, in view of recent discussions among administration leaders.

Secretary of State Elect Barrett said he subscribes to the Democratic organization policy "to work out public problems without reference to partisan considerations." The bitterness of the war outmodes petty partisan prejudices, he said.

He promised efficiency and economy and announced three more appointments: William Walsh of Springfield, who handles Sen. Lucas' business here, as chief clerk of the motor vehicle department; Emil Davis of Kincaid, chief clerk of the title department, and Miss Maud MacDonald of Batavia as personal secretary.

French Academy Names Roosevelt and Churchill

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 7.—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill's election as foreign associate members of the French academy of moral and political sciences was approved officially in a government decree published in todays official journal.

BRING ON THE NEXT COURSE, THEY'VE FINISHED THE APPETIZERS

Ward and U.S. Aids to Argue Issues Today

Issues involved in the government's long campaign to compel Montgomery Ward & Co. to obey orders of the war labor board will be presented in the federal District court in Chicago today. In a similar proceeding last May, Atty. Gen. Biddle avoided a ruling by abandoning his suit at the last minute.

Government lawyers arrived from Washington yesterday to join the district attorney in pressing the President's contention that Ward's conduct threatens to disrupt the national wage and price stabilization programs.

Besides the declarations made when the suit was filed, the attorneys have an affidavit sworn to by War Mobilizer Byrnes, asserting that the company's attitude has become a serious matter and suggesting that the mail order house be regarded as subject to the President's war decrees because some of its properties are "in vital centers of war production."

Seizure Called Illegal.

Ward's attorneys have filed a 20 page answer, declaring seizure of 16 stores and warehouses in Chicago and in five other cities by the war department under Presidential direction to be unconstitutional. The answer also declared that army officers placed in control have acted illegally.

Attached to the answer were 21 affidavits, some of which declared that army officers talked with employes in such a manner as to make it plain they faced army induction unless they coöperated with the military administration of the business. A denial was made by the army, but company spokesmen said, "We shall have our day in court." This was taken to indicate the affidavits would be used.

Today's hearing is on the government's suit for a temporary injunction restraining President Sewell L. Avery and 15 other Ward executives from interfering with the army's conduct of the business. It will be heard by Judge Philip L. Sullivan. The entire proceeding will be argument; there will be no testimony.

Plenty of Time.

Judge Sullivan said he had cleared his calendar of other matters and indicated he would give the attorneys all the time they wished. Speculation in the United States courthouse was that the hearing would take all of today and possibly run over to tomorrow.

The government's legal staff is headed by Solicitor General Charles Fahy, who came from Washington yesterday accompanied by his assistant, Hugh B. Cox, and Fowler Hamilton, a special assistant attorney general. They went at once to a conference with District Atty. J. Albert Woll. Attorneys Stuart S. Ball and Harold A. Smith will appear for the company.

The action last May was instituted when the army was in possession of Ward's the first time. The night before Judge William H. Holly was to rule, the government turned the properties back to the company and Biddle dropped his injunction suit without notice to the court. Left with nothing to pass on, Judge Holly dismissed the action and said he could not properly express an opinion on the merits of the case.

CASE OF INDIGESTION BRINGS 14 COPS AND FIREMEN TO HIS SIDE

Something that Robert Shapiro, 36, of Mount Union, Pa., ate yesterday disagreed with him. He suffered an attack of indigestion and collapsed in the lobby of the Drake hotel. This happened:

Within a few minutes a squad of three policemen from the East Chicago av. station arrived to aid Shapiro. Two minutes later, another squad of three men arrived from the same station.

Simultaneously, a wagon with two men arrived from the Hudson av. station, and fire department rescue squad No. 1, composed of six men in charge of Lt. William Fitzgerald appeared.

Shapiro, a merchant, who is registered at the Morrison hotel, was revived in 20 minutes, was taken to Wesley Memorial hospital, and from there to his hotel.

Shapiro said he felt much better.

Cut U.S. Films to Give Reds, Britain More

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—Americans at home and on the world's fighting fronts will get fewer and shorter motion pictures for their entertainment for the duration of the war in order to enable Britain and Russia to make propaganda pictures for distribution in the spheres of influence they are hacking out of war torn Europe.

This was learned today from official sources on the heels of yesterday's war production board action slashing the film allocation for the motion picture industry by approximately 10 per cent or 108 million feet for 1945.

The cut of 27 million feet each quarter of 1945 was made in 37 mm. film, which is the standard size for motion picture cameras. While there were no specific cut for other types of film, it was said the slash in standard film would be reflected in supplies of 16 mm. and 8 mm. motion picture film and in still camera film.

More for Army and Navy.

At the WPB film branch it was said that the cut was necessitated by increased demands for film by the army and navy and for making of industrial films which speed production on the home front.

However, it was learned in official circles that the real reason for the American film cut is that Russia, Britain, and other countries have made heavy demands for film lendlease, which were just allowed by the state department.

It was said that Russia has a comprehensive film propaganda program under way to help her consolidate and extend her influence in new territory she has already seized and thruout Europe. Russian films are being plotted for distribution in conquered territory in Poland, Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, and other areas.

Aided by Stettinius.

While WPB officials said lendlease of film has not increased appreciably, it was learned Russia had secured favorable action on a request for 37 million feet of film. The request, made last year, had been held up, it was said, by former Secretary of State Hull, but was readily approved by his successor, Secretary of State Stettinius.

At the same time a request for 30 million feet by Britain was also approved.

Britain, it is said, will use her film for propaganda purposes from Scandinavia to Greece.

FLYERS SWEEP ISLAND; BAG 41 ENEMY CRAFT

Ships Shell Coast, Says Tokyo.

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, Jan. 7 (AP).—America's 3d fleet carrier force struck Luzon Island in the Philippines last Friday only one day after its planes had carried out a destructive two day sweep over Formosa and the Ryukyu Islands, Adm. Nimitz reported today.

Swinging south from Formosa, 300 miles north of Luzon, the planes turned to the task of neutralizing Japan's air power remaining in the Philippines. Nimitz said incomplete reports on the strike showed 27 Japanese planes destroyed and 14 others damaged. Details on damage to Luzon shipping and ground installations are not yet available.

[The Tokyo radio said an American task force penetrated the Lingayen gulf of Luzon Friday and shelled the coast, and that 32 warships, including six carriers and 18 transports, had been sunk or damaged by Japanese fire. Tokyo said three other convoys were bound from Leyte to Lingayen gulf.]

Support for MacArthur.

Vice Adm. McCain's carrier force last swept Luzon in a three day strike Dec. 13, 14, and 15 in day and night attacks, pinning down the Japanese air force while Gen. MacArthur's troops invaded Mindoro Island.

It is apparent that the Pacific fleet carriers again are providing direct support for MacArthur's forces, which have seized Marinduque Island, a dozen miles off southern Luzon.

Nimitz' Sunday bulletin reported only eight Japanese planes shot out of the air while 19 were destroyed on the ground.

Altho the reports are incomplete they suggest steady attrition against Japanese airpower on Luzon has materially cut down the number of planes and airmen available to the enemy for Philippine defense.

Kurile Isle Shelled.

In the northern Pacific another fleet bombarded Suibachi, on Paramushiro, main Japanese base in the Kurile Islands, on Friday.

This hit the northern end of Japan's defense arc while at the same time other surface units were blasting Haha and Chichi Islands in the Bonins in previously announced strikes.

Capture Mindoro Town.

MACARTHUR'S HDQ., Philippines, Jan. 8 [Monday]—(AP).—American forces tightened their hold on Mindoro Island with the capture of the town of Paluan on the northwest coast Saturday, while strong formations of Liberator bombers again blasted Japanese airdromes on Luzon.

Gen. MacArthur's bulletin today announcing the Paluan landing contained nothing to support Japanese claims that an American invasion force is lying in Lingayen gulf, western Luzon, duelling with Japanese artillery preparatory to an invasion of Luzon.

Resistance was reported light in the Paluan operation. The 6th army force landed seven miles down the coast from the town, making the capture by land. Japanese supply dumps and communication facilities there were destroyed.

At Paluan the Yanks have another spearhead pointed toward Luzon. The town is only 30 miles south of the Luzon south central coast and 90 miles from Manila. It is 90 miles west of Marinduque Island, where the Americans landed Wednesday.

Paluan is 15 miles above the Mindoro west coast beachhead established by the Americans in a landing last Tuesday. The initial invasion of Mindoro was on the southwest coast Dec. 15. This was followed by the capture of a Japanese airdrome near San Jose.

Wedge Perils 7th Army Line, Berlin Claims

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP).—Berlin said tonight the new German thrust in northern Alsace had torn a dangerous salient in United States 7th army lines, putting the 7th "in similar position" to the American 1st army at the outset of the breakthru drive into Belgium.

"The only difference is that Gen. Eisenhower has no reserves at his disposal," as in Belgium, one broadcast added.

One Berlin broadcast said British-American attacks had pierced German lines in the area of Fraiture, about seven miles southeast of Vielsalm, on the northern flank of the Belgian bulge, but that the drive had been halted after a heavy battle. Several American blows near Houffalize north of Bastogne broke down under German offensive fire, it added.

"Equal to Aachen Battle."

A D. N. B. broadcast described the battle in Belgium as "equal to Aachen," and said "the best allied infantry and armored divisions, in a concentration of forces without precedence, are being flung into battle. Fighting hourly is increasing in fury on other focal points of the western front."

Sunday's German war bulletin as broadcast by Berlin said:

"At Wanssum in eastern Holland our troops in the last few days established a bridgehead across the Maas [Meuse] and repelled all counter-attacks of the British 3d division with high enemy losses.

"In the northern Ardennes, American attacks slackened yesterday [Saturday] due to the heavy losses of preceding days. In the Bastogne area our formations succeeded despite stubborn enemy resistance in breaking out several bases from the enemy front in the environs of the city.

Take Maginot Line Fort.

"Fighting in Lorraine and Alsace resulted in full successes for our troops. An American counter-attack failed northwest of Rohrbach and also at the exits of the valleys in the lower Vosges.

"At Philippsbourg a fort of the Maginot line capitulated with the whole American garrison. In the Rhine plain, north of Haguenau forest our troops liberated numerous localities and fortified their bridgehead north of Strasbourg despite enemy counter-attacks.

"In the west, 73 enemy tanks were destroyed yesterday. Numerous guns and anti-tank weapons were captured.

SMOG OVER CITY TURNS DAYLIGHT INTO DARKNESS

Smog, the combination of smoke and fog that forms when a breeze is lacking, darkened the loop between 12 and 1 p. m. yesterday and interrupted plane landings at Chicago airport. Street lights and automobile headlights were turned on down town.

Forecaster C. E. Hanlon said the fog persisted because the temperature 2,000 feet above the ground was warmer than at the surface, and prevented the air from rising. He said it was an unusual condition known as "inversion."

Incoming flights at the airport were canceled during the darkest period. American Airlines said four trips from Washington and two from New York were called off.

The snow forecast for yesterday frittered away to a few flurries. Hanlon said there would be occasional light snow today and tonight.

River Ice Makes Trickle of Water Over Niagara

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 7 (AP). —The roar of the American falls was silenced today as the flow of water was reduced to a trickle by ice jams in the upper river.

YANK ARMIES GAIN ON BOTH SIDES OF BULGE

Nazi Tanks Cross Rhine in Alsace.

PARIS, Jan. 7 (AP).—The United States 1st army struck the Germans a crippling blow today by seizing control of one of their two main lifelines in pushes of up to three miles along the 30 mile northern flank of the Belgian front and a one mile gain by the 3d army tightened the squeeze from the south.

The Germans countered with six or more new attacks elsewhere on the sprawling western front, crossing the Rhine into Alsace with tanks amid reports the menaced city of Strasbourg was being evacuated, and planting a small but solid bridgehead across the Maas [Meuse] river into eastern Holland.

First army successes not only put elements of three German armies in sore straits, but its swift progress after four previous days of slow slugging placed it on heights from which it now could look downhill on the enemy inside the Belgian bulge, a front dispatch said.

Holds to One Highway.

With only one main east-west highway remaining to him, Field Marshal Von Rundstedt found American forces closing on his communications center of La Roche on the west, menacing his north-south highway into his base of Houffalize in the center, and breaking across the Ambleve river into his strong positions on the north below Stavelot.

A front dispatch said German resistance in the Belgian bulge had taken on rearguard characteristics as Von Rundstedt struggled to pull back his forces with his main route back to Germany cut in three places.

Other American forces a few miles west of where the highway was cut drove to within three and a half miles of the enemy's highway center of La Roche after gains of nearly a mile which engulfed Rendeux and Devantave.

Resist British Pressure.

Capture of La Roche would make untenable the positions of German forces still resisting the British pressure at the western limits of the Belgian bulge.

Doughboy advances on the north also were threatening Von Rundstedt's north-south highway to Houffalize, a highway center around which the enemy front revolves.

Already he was forced to fall back on secondary roads for lateral movement as the Americans ripped up his positions along his main east-west route on the north.

The highway, running from Vielsalm to La Roche, first was slashed in a blow yesterday by Lt. Col. Sam Hogan's famed task force of the 3d armored division some eight miles north of Houffalize.

Other forces, possibly moving down from newly captured Odiegne, three miles west, cut across the road west of where it joins with one leading north from Houffalize. A third highway crossing was forced at an undefined point in the same area.

One Route Left Open.

These heavy blows left only one main east-west highway open for three crack German divisions fighting the British in the western sector, and this was menaced by the United States 3d army fighting no more than two miles away from it at several points on the south side of the bulge.

In intermittent snow and under leaden skies that again denied the allies close air support, the 82d air borne division gained up to three miles southwest of Stavelot in the swiftest push yet made by Lt. Gen. Hodges' forces on the north flank.

To the northeast of the 82d, the 30th infantry division forced across the Ambleve river, southwest of Stavelot, where the Germans were dug in and expected to make a strong stand.

Other units of the 3d armored division, moving up west of the 82d, reached the outskirts of Verleumont, 10 miles southwest of Stavelot.

The twin advances put the 82d and 3d on ridge positions overlooking the Salm river between Vielsalm and Salmchateau, five to nine miles south of Stavelot.

British tanks and infantry jumped off behind an artillery barrage in three drives that pushed more than 1,500 yards into German positions on the northwestern side of the Belgian bulge, a field dispatch reported.

In close coördination with the American drive to the left, the British forces quickly cleared the high ground northeast of the famous spa of Grimbiemont, four miles southeast of Marche, repulsed an enemy counter-attack and were advancing on Grimbiemont which is astride the Marche-en Roche road.

Paralleling reports of the 1st army's advance on the northern flank, a high army officer said the progress of Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army upward from the southern flank was "very satisfactory."

Gain West of Bastogne.

A front dispatch said Patton's 3d army forces drove another mile north along the front west of Bastogne, strengthening the American salient around the city. The gain was made along a three mile front three to six miles northwest of Bastogne against moderate resistance. The Germans have been dug in strongly along this line.

The 80th division of the 3d army bit deeper into northern Luxemburg and pushed within a mile and a half of Wiltz, cornerstone of the strong box positions Von Rundstedt has built up east of Bastogne. The advance on Wiltz was from the southeast, where the 80th over-ran the village of Dahl.

The Germans tried only one counter-attack yesterday against the 3d and this was beaten back with the loss of at least six enemy tanks near Harlange, at the bottom of the box seven miles southwest of Wiltz.

Cross Maas in Holland.

To the north in eastern Holland, the Germans lashed out across the Maas [Meuse] and established a bridgehead which was under counter-attack by British troops.

While the allied nutcracker was putting on the pressure in Belgium, Von Rundstedt lashed out along the Rhine in a new series of counter-thrusts.

American lines in the vicinity of Stundwiller and Ashbach, both about eight miles southeast of Wissembourg in the Maginot line, were dented by four German tank supported assaults, a front dispatch said. United States armor, however, knocked out six enemy tanks in battles in that sector and at the Nazis' Rhine bridgehead north of Strasbourg.

Mop Up at Wingen.

The Germans slackened their efforts to enlarge the Bitche salient where only patrol clashes were reported near Lemberg, Reipertswiller, and Philippsbourg. Remnants of German units which escaped from Wingen—now practically cleared—also were mopped up.

German forces which crossed the Rhine north of Strasbourg now are estimated to have five to eight tanks, some of which are dug in, south of Stattmatten, which is about 15 miles southeast of the important city of Haguenau.

Other enemy troops fought into Drusenheim on the west bank of the Rhine north of the Alsatian capital. The Germans hold Offendorf and still are fighting in Gambsheim, eight miles north of Strasbourg.

Germans in this pocket attacked toward Rohrwiller as big guns began to shell Haguenau.

Southwest of Strasbourg, on the Alsace plain, the Germans also hurled tank attacks against the French 1st army and drove French troops from Neunkirch, Witternheim, and Friesenheim, 18 miles south of the Alsatian capital and on the perimeter of the Germans' Colmar and Mulhouse pockets.

HOW YANK UNITS HASTILY THROWN IN HELD UP NAZIS

Surrounded Men Defy Surrender Demand.

BY EDWARD D. BALL.

WITH THE 82D AIR BORNE DIVISION IN BELGIUM, Jan. 6 [Delayed]—(AP).—The coroner's verdict in the case of the lieutenant colonel—one of Hitler's regimental commanders—would be that he destroyed himself in a moment of mental agitation.

That is precisely what happened to the colonel. After watching the 82d air borne division cut his troops to pieces yesterday he reached for his pistol and drilled a hole thru his head.

Battalion commanders of the same volksgrenadier division surrendered, along with 1,700 other troops.

Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin's air borne troops have killed as many Germans in three days as they took prisoner, wrested a dozen villages from the enemy, and reached the Salm river south of Stavelot.

TAKE 900 NAZI PRISONERS

BY THOBURN WIANT.

WITH THE 101ST AIR BORNE DIVISION, Bastogne, Jan. 7 (AP).—For the past 48 hours German artillery has been uncommonly quiet on this sector. Just before the period of silence the Germans threw everything but the guns themselves at Bastogne.

Bastogne looks as if it had been jammed thru a meat grinder. There are few pieces of window glass left that are larger than a man's hand. Hardly a building escaped destruction or severe damage.

This division has taken 900 prisoners in the Bastogne operation. Fifteen supposedly elite SS troopers were captured last night. They spoke only Russian. Prisoners include many of Hitler's jugend [youth] troops. The oldest are 18, the youngest 16. Many of them believe the Germans have occupied Liege and Brussels. When we laugh at such statements they insist we are trying to cover up.

HOGAN'S LOOSE AGAIN

BY KENNETH L. DIXON.

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN BELGIUM, Jan. 7 (AP).—"Task Force Hogan" has hit again. Lt. Col. Sam Hogan, 3d armored division unit which walked back from the dead the day after Christmas slashed the vital highway southeast of Grand Menil.

The daring job was done yesterday and the outfit exacted full revenge for the 60 iron horses it had to "shoot and leave behind" the last time.

The lateral highway it slashed was vital for enemy supply and panzer operation. Hogan's task force was spearheaded by a jeep flying the flag of the Lone Star state—the same flag which inspired a legend among the French forces of resistance that Hogan was "a leader of the American resistance movement."

Yesterday the word spread: "Hogan is loose again."

TAKE LUXEMBURG TOWN

BY LEWIS HAWKINS.

WITH THE 80TH DIVISION, Goesdorf, Luxemburg, Jan. 7 (AP).—This mountain village was taken yesterday by swift movement and surprise.

Men of the 319th regiment struck across the Sure river a mile south of here yesterday, moved quickly and silently thru the steep wooded hills on hair-pin curved roads, wiped out sleeping outposts, and overcame a garrison of 70, capturing 50 and killing the rest.

LAUGH WAS ON THEM

WITH THE 35TH DIVISION, Jan. 7 (AP).—Corp. Ed Brenna, New York City, and Pvt. Jerry Lenhart, Chase City, Nev., were lying under a truck during an artillery barrage, laughing at a soldier trying to retrieve his helmet, dropped in his rush to a foxhole.

Every time the soldier climbed out of the hole and almost reached the helmet, another shell sent him scurrying back. Brenna and Lenhart thought that was very funny.

They quit laughing after the barrage lifted. The soldier climbed from the foxhole, put on his helmet, and pointed to a red-lettered sign on the truck under which they had taken refuge. The sign read: "Explosives."

ASSERTS PLANE LOSS IN TRAINING TOPS WAR TOLL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—Sen. Johnson [D., Colo.] said today the army lost more planes in training than the enemy had shot down and called for a big reserve of flyers in the future.

Lack of a supply forced the army to rush flyers thru training when war started, Johnson said. He advocated starting 100,000 youths in training each year.

LINER ROMA SET AFIRE AT GENOA BY U. S. PLANES

ROME, Jan. 7 (AP).—The former Italian trans-Atlantic liner Roma has been set afire in Genoa harbor by Thunderbolts of the United States 12th air force, allied headquarters announced today. The Roma, which has been converted into an aircraft carrier and renamed the Aquila, was hit by two big bombs. Other Thunderbolts attacked enemy shipping in Imperia harbor.

Heavy rains bogged down action on the Italian battle front but Canadian tanks and infantry cut off two German companies in the marshes near the lagoon Valli di Comacchio, 10 miles northwest of Ravenna on the Adriatic coast. An enemy artillery unit also was cut off. Most of the trapped Nazis were captured or killed. Activity on the 5th army front was sharply curtailed by the weather.

The British destroyer Lookout bombarded enemy batteries in the Mesa area southeast of La Spezia.

NAZIS DEMAND CIVILIANS GIVE SPARE CLOTHING

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan. 7 (AP).—With a great splash of publicity the Nazis today asked the German people to sacrifice for the war effort all but the barest essentials of clothing they still possess.

Starting tomorrow 300,000 part time workers, operating thru many thousand collection depots, will start ferreting out such items as old uniforms of the Nazi party, army, policemen, firemen and postmen, as well as civilian garments from underwear to overcoats.

The drive is being conducted to equip "thousands of volkssturm battalions for front service," the Berlin correspondent of the Svenska Dagbladet wrote. The Germans also announced 12 to 14 year old boys and girls, not otherwise employed, would be put to work in postoffices.

1ST ARMY STAFF WEIGHED NAZIS' POWER LIGHTLY

Knew Capacity to Attack, Underestimated Foe.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, Belgium, Jan. 5 [Delayed].—Weeks before Nazi Field Marshal von Rundstedt smashed into the Belgian Ardennes sector, his capability of mounting a strong counter-offensive was clearly realized by the 1st army. But the weight with which he finally struck did come as a surprise to most staff officers.

As early as Nov. 30, attention was called here to the divisions the German commander in the west was massing opposite the 1st and 9th army sectors. Again on Dec. 10, six days before the enemy attacked Lt. Gen. Hodges' right flank, officers charged with predicting the German moves repeated the warning that Van Rundstedt had the capability of mounting a powerful counter-offensive against us.

It was pointed out then that such an offensive could be launched anywhere the German commander chose along our entire front, as well as against the 9th army. And he could attack at a time of his own choosing.

Foe Underestimated.

If this possibility was known, the reader might well ask whether the Germans had again been underestimated.

Certainly it must be said that the German capacity to react to our piercing of his Siegfried line in the Aachen sector had been underestimated. The allies, both American and British, apparently have consistently underestimated the Germans' industrial capacity, their ability to levy new divisions and reform battered old ones, and, at times, even their professional military sureness in the field of strategy.

Halted inside the Siegfried wall by failure of his supply lines, Gen. Hodges was compelled to wait precious weeks before renewing his offensive. And in those weeks, Von Rundstedt gathered his forces, husbanded his gasoline and other supplies, and succeeded in acquiring new tanks, guns, and other equipment to meet our threat.

Resistance Stiffens.

When Gen. Hodges again started attacking, it soon became apparent the character of German resistance was strengthening. With almost every terrain feature in his favor, the enemy contested every yard of our advance bitterly, making us pay dearly for the towns and roads and forests we won.

And as the German resistance stiffened all along the line, we learned of the reserves Von Rundstedt was massing before Cologne. His 6th panzer army was cocked in near the Rhine, waiting, as we thought, to smash into our spearheads after they had crossed the swollen Roer river.

By the first few days of December Lt. Gen. Simpson's 9th army was in line along the Roer. Gen. Hodges had his 7th corps virtually up against the river, too, but the crossing was not possible then.

Hodges hoped he would not have to send his men around the headwaters of the Roer, for the country there is brutal and the Germans have strong fortifications. One attempt, pointed at Schmidt, was repulsed.

Von Rundstedt Strikes.

Again Hodges started his ground attack on Dec. 13 with his 5th corps. Fighting slowly thru the maze of German pillboxes, the attack had made about 2,000 yards when Von Rundstedt cracked back at us with his Ardennes offensive.

This, then, was the situation when Von Rundstedt picked up the ball and started his all-out gamble for victory, stalemate, or defeat. It was a situation which had been envisioned in many of its aspects by the men whose decisions operate this army.

There had been a tremendous concentration of German troops east of Schleiden. SS [elite guards] soldiers were packed like sardines in every village, presenting targets which would be of immense tactical value. However, the daily air force bulletins stressed the strategical bombing efforts along the Rhine river and deeper into the reich.

"War of Attrition" Figured.

On Dec. 1, when this reporter returned here from a home leave, he was told, "The fighting is now hard, bitter, and slow. It has become a war of attrition, and the Germans are fighting ferociously.

"The Germans are building up large reserves, and the time is coming when Von Rundstedt must make up his mind to act. He can withhold his reserves from the line and use them with his 6th panzer army to attack us on the Cologne plain when we cross the river, where there will be the biggest battle of the war. Or, when he believes the force of our present offensive is blunted, he can counter-attack strongly."

At this time the 1st army was holding a front of more than 120 miles, the longest front of any allied army. Its striking power was concentrated in the 7th and 5th corps sectors, before Duren and opposite the upper Roer.

Hodges was continuing to attack. But you can't very well attack along a 120 mile front. The smart general must put as much as he can into a small area to hit the enemy a crushing blow.

Right Flank Weak.

Hodges had his power collected on the relatively small sectors of the 7th and 5th corps fronts. But his right flank was thinly held.

This was the domain of Maj. Gen. Troy Middleton's 8th corps. It was a corps, but his scanty forces actually held a line which properly should have been covered by an army. For Middleton's front was 88 miles long, extending from the Echternach area of the lower Luxemburg border, north to the Schnee Eifel in Germany, opposite St. Vith.

The 1st army knew well that this right flank was exposed. If there had been more divisions available to this command, it would be logical to assume that some would be used to reënforce this flank. The army knew that Middleton's front was thin, for it was covered by only three infantry divisions, two of which, the 4th and the 28th, had been put in this "quiet" sector to recuperate after their nightmare of the Hurtgen forest campaign. The 9th armored division was in the corps' reserve.

Had to Take Risk.

We looked at our operational map and we shuddered—three divisions, two of them weakened by heavy fighting, holding an 88 mile front with the help of a light mechanized cavalry screen! Hodges knew his right was weak, but it was a calculated risk he must take with the forces at his disposal if he was to continue his offensive on the Roer river line.

The 1st division, after one of its bloodiest battles, had just been withdrawn from the line and was resting. The 3d armored also had been withdrawn from the line. Both were poised in the rear, where they could be moved quickly south should the Germans attack our weak right flank.

The 1st army tacticians had their eyes at this time mostly on the German concentration in the Cologne area. They knew Von Rundstedt must act soon if he was to try to seize the initiative, and they had the utmost regard for the German field marshal's professional ability.

Weight of Blow Surprises.

They hoped he would not attack on the right, but if he did, they thought we might have enough strength to handle the first part of the offensive until other troops could be brought in. But the Germans had been able to mass a greater weight than any one had considered possible in an area southwest of Monschau. We knew Von Rundstedt was capable of strong counter-blows, but we did not know the extent of the weight he had been able to muster.

For several days foul weather had prevented any aerial observation on our part. And it was during this period, obviously, that Von Rundstedt shifted his striking force south.

On Dec. 16, Von Rundstedt struck. His 6th panzer army was on his right flank. His 5th panzer army was in the center, and his 7th army was on the southern flank, with reserves for each army massed in the rear areas. He smashed at the lower section of Hodges' 5th corps and on down the entire 88 mile length of the 8th corps front.

On the 17th, aware by then that the Germans were attacking heavily, Hodges alerted the 1st division, then in the 5th corps reserve. Its 26th infantry regiment was the first unit to reach the new line.

U. S. Lines Stiffen.

After the initial assault had overrun several corps positions and pushed the line back, the corps stiffened. The 9th, 2d, 1st, and 99th divisions held firm from Monschau on down around Bullingen, and back toward Malmedy, the northern shoulder of the enemy gap.

The 30th division had been drawn immediately from the 9th army and rolled into position along the Malmedy-Stavelot-Stoumont line, just in the nick of time. With the combat command of the veteran 3d armored division under Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose, it held vital road junctions, preventing the panzers from slashing north and northwest toward Liege. But as the German pressure continued and the spearheads plunged on thru the gaps, Hodges called for more divisions.

These were quickly released to him by Lt. Gen. Bradley, commander of the 12th army group. Hodges had seen instantly that St. Vith was vital. Some infantry had been cut off on the Schnee Eifel, and what was left, together with one combat command of the 9th armored, was trying to hold this strategic road junction.

Hold St. Vith 5 Days.

Hodges sent Brig. Gen. Robert W. Hasbrouck's 7th armored division roaring across the path of the German armor to lend a hand at St. Vith. We held that town for five days.

By then, this force had succeeded in completely disrupting the enemy time table, denying him the use of roads over which he badly needed to bring up supplies and reënforcements to troops attacking in the Stavelot-Stoumont-La Gleize pocket. To avoid the needless sacrifice of good men, Hodges now ordered Hasbrouck to withdraw and give up St. Vith.

In this respect, history may decide there were three strategic American Alamos in the course of Von Rundstedt's drive. There were many more, of course, but probably the three most important were, reading from north to south: the stone wall defense of the 5th corps in the Monschau-Bullingen area, St. Vith, and Bastogne.

Stop Liege Drive.

The 5th corps prevented Von Rundstedt from realizing his first objective of driving his panzers directly thru to Liege, a maneuver which not only would have split the 1st army but imperiled the 9th army and the British 21st army group.

By holding St. Vith, the Americans prevented Von Rundstedt from using his best road net to supply his armored spearheads. It slowed his efforts to loop around farther west in order to reach Namur and Liege.

And the bastion of Bastogne, defended by the 10th armored and the 101st air-borne divisions, again sealed off the Germans' efforts as they shifted farther west, trying to loop still farther over other road nets in their drive to outflank Liege.

Continuing with developments in the American reaction to the German break-thru: As the German columns pushed on past St. Vith on either side and rolled down toward Houffalize, northeast of Bastogne, Hodges called for Maj. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgeway's 18th air-borne corps.

Move North Swiftly.

In incredibly quick time the corps swept north from rear training areas. Using trucks instead of their normal plane transportation, the 82d air-borne division closed into the area west of Vielsalm, protecting Hasbrouck's withdrawal, while the 101st took up the burden of Bastogne.

By Dec. 20, too, it had become apparent that Von Runstedt's splitting tactics actually had created two separate fronts. It has also become increasingly difficult for Hodges to maintain contact with Bradley. Acting, therefore, on an American suggestion, the 1st and 9th armies were turned over to British Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st army group for operational control.

At about the time control was passing to Montgomery, British troops dropped south to backstop along the line of the Meuse river. Later some crossed over, meeting the Germans at the western end of Von Runstedt's salient. But as one Briton said yesterday to the correspondents, "For God's sake, don't say that we came down here and stopped the Germans. The Americans had stopped them before we arrived. All we're doing is backstopping the Yanks."

7th Corps Moves Secretly.

Meanwhile, too, Simpson's 9th army covered the left flank of the 1st army. This allowed Hodges to pluck Maj. Gen. J. Lawton Collins and his 7th corps out of the Duren sector. They were deposited secretly in the Marche area.

The German 2d SS panzer division was still driving for the Meuse, and actually had a few patrols on the river, so Collins turned loose some of his units.

The 84th fought at Hotton, which earlier had been defended by a cooks' and bakers' brigade of the 3d armored division for a considerable time. And then Maj. Gen. Ernest M. Harmon wheeled his armor into the Celles area, where, in four days and nights of ferocious fighting, he took a heavy toll from the Germans. That battle was the end of the German effort to reach the Meuse and turn toward the promised land of Liege.

Nazi Gamble Fails.

Von Rundstedt's forces had driven more than 50 miles thru the 1st army's right flank. But the Nazi marshal had been able to create a base for this wedge of about 35 air miles. And his troops had failed to grab our big supply dumps, which were to keep them rolling. It was a gamble for gasoline, and it failed.

And with its failure, Hodges was ready once more to smash back at the Germans, this time with offensive power.

The American army had shown itself capable of "rolling with the punch," to use a boxing term; to roll with the punch and at the same time to rush in troops to stave off what might have been a disastrous blow.

And Hodges had shown he was still master of quick movement of large masses of men with a minimum of confusion, a commander capable of meeting the most sustained effort the Germans could launch, and meeting the crisis without panic.

CHINESE SEIZE TOWN IN BURMA; BRITISH AND JAPS IN BATTLE

SOUTHEAST ASIA HDQ., Kandy, Ceylon, Jan. 7 (AP).—Chinese troops fighting down the Bhamo-Namhkam road in northern Burma have seized Manwing, 160 miles northeast of Mandalay, and other units are nearing the Shweli river, southeast asia headquarters announced today.

British 14th army troops advancing on Mandalay engaged Japanese in the Kabo and Yeu sectors, and a severe battle with entrenched enemy forces occurred three miles east of Yeu, 70 miles northwest of Mandalay, the bulletin added.

Fighter and medium bombers were active over all sectors in Burma, hitting river craft, bridges, railway stock, and airdrome runways, at a cost of one plane.

FRANCE TO CALL UP SIX CLASSES FOR NEW ARMY

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 7.—President Roosevelt's announcement that the United States is about to equip a new French army with modern weapons for combat duty brought a response here today from Andre Diethelm, minister of war, that the De Gaulle government proposed to call up six classes of French youths for the formation of this new army.

The class of 1943 will be called at the end of this month and Diethelm announced today that by stages and by regions the classes of 1940, 1941, 1942, 1944, and 1945 would be called up.

Demobilization Angle.

It was expected here that the reorganization of a big French army on combat footing with modern weapons would enable the earlier demobilization of American troops serving in France and that may be one of the reasons for the decision to give arms to the French after the initial period of hesitancy occasioned by unknown political factors in this country's future.

Diethelm said today the 1943 conscripts would be called up within two or three weeks as barracks and clothing and equipment become available.

At the beginning of spring the class of 1944 would follow and subsequently the class of 1945. Some time later it is the government's intention to call up the classes of 1940, 1941, and 1942.

Nazis Banned Training.

This project will mean that young Frenchmen who have had no military training because, following the French defeat in 1940 the French army was disbanded under German orders, will be conscripted now for army service.

Under the Vichy government an effort was made to find a substitute for military conscription by calling up boys of 18 for labor in youth camps.

Diethelm said that the classes of 1940, 1941, and 1942 would be small because many in those classes either were working on enforced labor in Germany or already were volunteers with the French forces.

According to Diethelm, French Forces of the Interior already in service will be armed with heavier weapons than they now have.

Connolly of Los Angeles, commanding the United States army's Persian gulf command, has been recalled to the United States and has been succeeded by Brig. Gen. Donald P. Booth of Albany, N. Y., who has been his chief of staff, it was disclosed today. Gen. Booth was appointed director of Persian gulf ports in October, 1942.

FIVE CHICAGOANS WIN MEDALS FOR DEEDS AT METZ

95th Infantry Division Members Honored.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY, Jan. 7.—Two Chicagoans have been awarded the silver star for gallantry during the battle for Metz by order of Maj. Gen. Harry L. Twaddle, commander of the 95th infantry division.

First Lt. John J. Martin, 6152 S. Talman av., a member of the 377th regiment, was wounded in the throat while leading his platoon, but returned to command after receiving first aid, only to be wounded again, treated again, and returned to action once more, his example "inspiring his men and greatly aiding the attack."

Sgt. Sylvester C. Leever, 5857 Gunnison st., of the same regiment, was in charge of a volunteer wire team repairing a broken line between Metz and Saarlautern under terrific shelling, which necessitated their crawling along from break to break. After several breaks had been repaired, a shell landed in the midst of the group, killing one man and wounding three others, including Sgt. Leever.

Three Get Bronze Stars.

Three other Chicagoans attached to the 95th division have been awarded bronze stars. Sgt. Stanley Woozniak, 8733 Kingston av., of the 377th regiment, with the aid of three other men, used a wooden door as a litter and evacuated a wounded comrade to safety despite heavy enemy mortar fire. Lt. Theodore P. Gianis, 6144 N. Richmond st., of the 920th field artillery battalion, made a dangerous night crossing of the Moselle river under fire to pass across a communications cable. Sgt. Edward O. Mackert, 250 Allen av., West Chicago, a member of the 95th quartermaster company, greatly aided in maintaining the flow of supplies vital to the Metz attack.

Midwestern members of the crack 4th armored division have been given bronze stars by order of Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Gaffey, divisional commander.

Capt. Wayne M. Henkel of Afton, Ia., medical officer attached to the 46th medical battalion, organized the evacuation of casualties despite artillery fire. Aided by another officer and the medical clearing section, he treated and evacuated more than 100 patients in one 10 hour stretch.

Stays at Observation Post.

Pvt. Frank J. Krejci of Cedar Rapids, Ia., with the 53d armored infantry battalion, remained at an artillery observation post despite enemy counter-artillery fire. His action resulted in an estimated 30 enemy casualties.

Corp. Wilbur J. Sailer, Route 4, Mount Pleasant, Mich., of the 66th armored field artillery battalion, drove an ambulance to evacuate wounded despite the dangers of black-out travel under heavy enemy shelling.

The crews of two tank destroyers of the 704th tank destroyer battalion who held off an enemy infantry attack supported by four Tiger tanks also were given bronze stars. Altho under machine gun, artillery, mortar, and tank fire, they destroyed one enemy tank, disabled another, and held their ground even when the enemy infantry approached within 50 yards.

Midwesterners decorated were Sgt. Harold E. Brown of Junction City, O.; Pvt. Stanley Wojnarski of Detroit, Mich.; Sgt. Beryle M. Bess of Liverpool, O., and Sgt. Orville D. Dunlap, Dayton, O.

STABBING VICTIM DIES.

Aaron McCray, 42, Negro, of 5008 Calumet av., who was found in front of 536 E. Pershing rd., Dec. 10, with a knife sticking in his head, died yesterday in County hospital. Sam Mims, 31, of 4233 Indiana av., and L. D. Hudson, 22, of 4422 Prairie av., both Negroes, are under arrest as his assailants.

Illinois Captain and His Men Escape.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY IN BELGIUM, Jan. 7.—Capt. Lee E. Osbourne of Rock Island, Ill., had a narrow escape from capture shortly after the German thrust into Belgium.

Capt. Osbourne, a member of a tank destroyer battalion of the 28th infantry division, whose command post was overrun, was making his way down a road one night when he heard hobnailed boots approaching. He and 70 other Americans fell flat in a field. The closest German walked within two feet of Osbourne's head but all escaped unobserved, altho 300 Germans marched by.

Lt. Joseph A. Hopkins of 947 N. Oakley blvd., Chicago, an artillery observer, also had a close call. He was in a liaison plane piloted by Lt. Eugene J. Mullane of Brooklyn, N. Y., when the enemy opened fire with small arms, causing the pilot to take evasive action. As the tiny plane dived and twisted, Lt. Hopkins' goggles slipped off. He leaned forward to grab them and was fastening them behind his head when a rifle bullet came up thru the plane and cut the safety belt which was holding him in. It just nicked his hand between the thumb and forefinger. The bullet would have wounded him seriously if he hadn't been leaning forward. Finally the plane's motor was hit by a bullet. Lt. Mullane landed it safely near Wiltz, but was forced to burn and abandon it because the enemy was advancing swiftly.

U. S. REGIMENT, CUT OFF, PUNCHES WAY THRU NAZIS

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, Belgium, Jan. 7.—When Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's field gray hordes cracked thru the 8th corps front on the Luxemburg border Dec. 16, they cut the 112th infantry regiment off from the rest of the 28th [the "Bloody Bucket"] division.

But the regiment held together. It beat off elements of two German divisions and it punched back thru the enemy encirclement to reach our lines and keep on fighting. And in this action two Illinois men distinguished themselves.

One was the regimental commander, Col. G. M. Nelson of Paris, Ill., and Philadelphia, Pa. The other was Lt. Joseph W. Morgan of Somonauk, executive officer of the 1st battalion.

Surprised at Dawn.

Surprised by a dawn attack, the regiment, which had been holding a sector from Lutzkamper, Germany, to Lieler, Luxemburg, started fighting. One battalion was holding a 2,000 yard front but it remained intact with every one, cooks, bakers, and clerks firing weapons. Company M's kitchen was overrun as breakfast was being prepared. But before the Germans could eat the food, their mortar section lobbed shells onto its own breakfast, killing 100 Germans.

In an adjoining company the cooks captured 25 Germans. Two soldiers from a third battalion, with their tommy guns, kept one bridge free, killing 50 of the enemy.

Nazis Hold Escape Bridge.

When the 1st battalion was ordered to withdraw after beating off the Germans for three days they found Germans holding the bridge on their escape route. Morgan distracted the Germans by giving them orders in German while his own men crossed in safety.

On Dec. 22 this battalion and regimental headquarters were cut off. But Col. Nelson made a reconnaissance of the terrain, then shoved his men thru the enemy lines with little loss of personnel or equipment and rejoined the other regimental units.

Mundelein Colonel Saves Gas.

In the famous "palace guard" action in which cooks, orderlies, military policemen, engineers and truck drivers, saved millions of gallons of gasoline from the advancing Nazi hordes, another Illinoisan distinguished himself. Lt. Col. William F. Fiske of Mundelein commanded the motley guard.

Fiske's men held out until reenforcements arrived. German spearheads got within two and a half miles of the headquarters, and their columns passed 500 yards from the gas dump. Aiding in this defense was an army security force commanded by an army provost marshal, Col. Sterling Wright of Kansas City, Mo.

FOUND: BATTERY WHICH CUSSES ITS OWN GUNS!

There's Good Reason: They're German.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN GERMANY, Jan. 7.—It is not often that artillery men will traduce their own guns. But in the Hurtgen forest is a battery of 105s whose members admit their guns are "lousy."

"You see," explained Pvt. Wilbur Goodwin of Chicago, "they're all captured German guns, and they don't stack up to our own."

Goodwin, who is 28 years old, explained that all the members of this outfit were trained to operate American 240s, but agreed to take over and operate the rebuilt enemy weapons using ammunition taken in the Falaise gap. The unit has 16 guns in this position from a total of 40 which the Nazis abandoned in their flight across France.

Easily Recognized.

"It's just that much more trouble for the Germans," added Corp. John Careek of New York, a former band leader. "They don't like us either, apparently. They've tried to reach us with their guns several times but can't get over that hill."

The guns are located in a valley at the foot of snow banked, wooded slopes and can be seen from the road. They are a strange sight amid the American artillery, because they are easily recognizable as enemy weapons. They have a bulging muzzle and still bear the familiar greenish brown camouflage with which the German dabs all his equipment

Light Arms Also German.

Except for the men themselves and the direction they are firing, the unit must be an astonishing sight for prisoners being led to the rear. Not only the big guns are German, but the machine guns and anti-aircraft guns guarding the position also were captured from the enemy. Nearly all the men carry German machine pistols and side arms. Their mascot is a German dog which wandered across the front lines in search of food.

The trees on all sides are shredded, torn by artillery fire, and attesting the struggle for these rolling woodlands. The men are living in dugouts with log roofs, some virtually log cabins built over foxholes. It is impossible to heat the subterranean dwellings because heat thaws the frozen ground and brings water trickling down the muddy sides.

"The only thing that worries us is whether any of these German shells have been doctored," said one of the men.

CATHOLIC G. I.S WITNESS DEEP TRIBUTE TO U. S.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

LUXEMBURG, Jan. 7.—Kneeling in utter silence during the elevation of the host at mass this morning in the Roman Catholic church here, 600 Catholic American soldiers witnessed one of the most profound tributes paid them in this war.

At the solemn moment of the consecration of the mass the church organist brought tears to the eyes of the American troops and a thousand Luxemburgers when he played our national anthem. With triumphant notes, "The Star Spangled Banner" reverberated from the walls of the church, in tribute to the American defense of Luxemburg in the present German attack.

The priest had just preached a sermon in his native tongue, and at the end he gave thanks in English for the American defense.

WHY HOOSIERS CAN'T GET THEIR AUTOS REPAIRED

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LEYTE ISLAND, P. I., Jan. 7.—If Indiana car owners are having difficulty finding mechanics to keep the old crates running, here is one reason. One part of the woods here is full of mechanics, all from Indiana.

The men make up an ordnance maintenance company. They repair everything from watches to 8-inch guns, but their specialty is tanks. They are getting so much practice that should Hoosier motorists ever acquire a tank the mechanics will be able to fix the trouble without lifting the hood.

Capt. John Costello, Sioux Falls, S. D., the company commander, who feels like a G. I. lost in a WAC camp, since he is about the only man not a Hoosier, says the biggest problem is spare parts. As a result he spends much time cruising the country, looking for abandoned vehicles and guns. His mechanics strip these wrecks clean.

Fix Up Comfortable Camp.

Of mechanical bent, these men have fixed themselves one of the best camps on the island, complete with lights, refrigerator, and radios.

Any Hoosier auto dealer, who moans at home of the lack of mechanics, has himself and his colleagues to blame. The mechanics were recruited by the State Auto Dealers' association.

Some skeptics doubt the veracity of Maj. Arthur Garvey, Minneapolis, Minn., commander of the first anti-aircraft battalion to land in the Philippines. The major claims his boys have shot down 21 Jap planes and have assisted in knocking out another 19.

To convince these skeptics, Maj. Garvey points out the Jap flags painted on the guns. If these don't satisfy, he permits his boys to give shot by shot accounts of their kills. If still pressed, the major resorts to his clincher: "Three-fourths of my men are from Chicago."

Maybe He Could Write.

A colonel in an infantry unit here wanted to reward one of his privates, an Appalachian hill man. "I'm going to make you a clerk," he said. The private stammered he would rather pass up the job. "I can't read," he explained.

"You mean you can't read writing?" the officer asked.

"I can't read writing, sir," he said. "Gosh, colonel, I can't even read reading!"

CREW STAYS WITH BURNING PLANE TILL IT'S OVER U. S. LINES

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP).—While flames crept along flak-riddled wings toward a 400 gallon gasoline tank, Lt. Glenn Thompson, Ashland, Ky., and his crew stuck with their Flying Fortress for 20 minutes until out of Germany and over American lines before bailing out.

The bomber exploded a few seconds after Thompson followed the crew to safety by parachute. When the crew landed they had to do a lot of fast talking to American infantrymen on the lookout for Nazi parachute troops dressed in United States uniforms.

Lt. Donald Jackson, Alton, Ill. and Sgt. Japeth Turley, 1123 Burton av., New Albany, Ind., were in the crew.

MUSICIAN PLAYS TUNE ON A RIFLE, 35 GERMANS DIE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY, Belgium, Jan. 6.—Pvt. Nathaniel M. Quinton, Co. A., 112th regiment, 28th infantry division, remained at his post when the rest of his party had been killed by direct fire from a German 88 mounted on a tank.

The German tanks advanced but were forced back by American tank fire. Quinton remained firm. Then a platoon of Nazi infantry advanced to within 25 yards of his position. Quinton, a dance band musician in civilian life, played a little hot music with his Browning automatic rifle and killed 20 of them. The remainder were forced to fall back.

Twice immediately after a group of 15 Nazi infantrymen armed with automatic pistols tried to rush Pvt. Quinton's position but were driven off by his accurate fire. Then they tried in small units to infiltrate with quick dashes. Quinton killed the 15 Germans.

'MONTY' PRAISES FIGHTING SKILL OF YANK SOLDIER

Rebukes British Papers for Criticisms.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Field Marshal Montgomery.

WITH U. S. FORCES IN GERMANY, Jan. 7.—The courage and fighting qualities of the American doughboy saved the day for the allies on the western front when Field Marshal Von Rundstedt launched the surprise German drive toward the Meuse river last month, Field Marshal Montgomery asserted today.

The British general, who was placed in command of the United States 1st and 9th armies after the German break-thru threatened American communications, paid tribute to Yank fighting men in words of high praise seldom, if ever, heard before from one of Britain's top ranking military figures, renowned for the jealous pride of his own service men.

Allied Solidarity Vital.

Montgomery rebuked the British press for publishing "uncomplimentary articles" about Gen. Eisenhower. He asserted allied solidarity is vital at this stage of the war and any one who tries to break up the team spirit of the allies definitely is helping the enemy. Eisenhower is "the captain of the team," said Montgomery. He continued:

"If you try to get at the captain of the team you're liable to induce loss of confidence and this may spread and have disastrous results. I am absolutely devoted to Ike [Eisenhower's nickname]; we are the greatest friends. It grieves me when I see uncomplimentary articles about him in the British press; he bears a great burden and he needs our fullest support and he has a right to expect it."

First Appearance.

It was Montgomery's first appearance since the announcement he is now commanding all allied troops north of the German bulge. His salute to the courage of American soldiers climaxed nearly three weeks of one disclosure after another of Yank heroism blocking the German drive.

"When all is said and done I shall always feel that Von Rundstedt was really beaten by the good fighting qualities of the American soldier and by the team work of the allies," he said. "I first saw the American soldier in battle in Sicily and I formed then a very high opinion of him. I saw him again in Italy. And I have seen a great deal of him in this campaign.

"I want to take this opportunity to pay public tribute to him.

"Brave Fighting Man."

"He is a brave fighting man, steady under fire and with that tenacity in battle which stamps him as a first class soldier; all these qualities have been shown in a marked degree during the present battle.

"I've spent my military career with the British soldier and I've come to love him with a great love. I've now formed a very great affection and admiration for the American soldier. I salute the brave fighting men of America; I never want to fight alongside better soldiers."

He singled out two American armored divisions, the 2d and 7th, and two United States air borne divisions, the 82d and 101st, and the 106th infantry as doing a great job. He also lauded the United States 7th corps.

Discusses Nazi Strategy.

"What was Von Rundstedt trying to achieve? I don't know," Montgomery said. "The only guide we have is his order of the day which told his soldiers they must go all out on this last big effort.

"On the map you see his gains, that will not win the war. He is slowly but surely to lose it all. He must have scraped together every reserve he could lay his hands on for his job.

"One must admit that he has dealt a sharp blow and he has sent us reeling back, but we recovered and he has been unable to gain any great advantage. He has therefore failed in his strategic purpose, unless the prize is smaller than his men were told.

Heading for Meuse.

"Von Rundstedt attacked on Dec. 16. He obtained a tactical surprise. He drove a deep wedge into the center of the 1st army and split American forces in two. The situation loomed as if it might become awkward. The Germans had broken right thru the spot and were heading for the Meuse.

"As soon as I saw what was happening, I took certain steps myself to insure that if the Germans got to the Meuse they could certainly not get over that river. And I carried out certain movements so as to provide balanced dispositions to meet the threatened danger."

Montgomery at the time had command only of the British 2d and Canadian 1st armies, and on his own he shifted some troops south to meet the threat.

"Then the situation began to deteriorate, but the whole allied team rallied to meet the danger. National considerations were thrown overboard; Gen. Eisenhower placed me in command of the whole northern front," Montgomery said.

Employs Whole Power.

"I employed the whole available power of the British group of armies. This power was brought into play very gradually and in such a way that it would not interfere with American lines of communications. Finally it was put into battle with a bang, and today British divisions are fighting hard on the right flank of the United States 1st army. . . . This is a fine allied picture.

"The battle has been most interesting. I think possibly it is one of the most interesting and tricky battles I have ever handled, with great issues at stake.

"The first thing you must do in a battle is to shape it to your desire. You must have poise and balance so that no matter what the enemy does it will not push you off balance.

"You must look around for weak spots and, bring something up to plug them, and then after you have done that you can go ahead with your own plans. This is the terrific principle of battle. I learned it in Africa.

"Gets Things in Balance."

"The battle area was untidy and so it had to be tidied up and I busied myself with getting it tidy and getting things in balance. It was necessary to regroup the 1st and 9th American armies and British armies.

"I formed an offensive army corps—the 7th—under the very fine American Gen. Collins [Maj. Gen. J. Lawton Collins] and had to decide where to put it. It turned out that where I put it was not a bad place, altho it was a large part luck."

Altho he had placed the 7th corps there for offensive purposes, Montgomery continued, Von Rundstedt tried a powerful left hook up the Meuse toward Liege and ran right into the power of the American 2d armored division under Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon. In battle this division virtually wiped out Von Rundstedt's spearhead—the 2d panzer [armored] division.

"Seventh Now Is Attacking."

"This changed plans, and I had to reform the corps again for an offensive, and this time it was good business and the 7th corps now is attacking. You can't hurry these things. You must get well balanced and have a tidy show," Montgomery said.

"We have halted the Germans, sealed them off, and are now writing them off. German divisions have suffered heavily, but I say this about a battle. It is a very great mistake to think it is over. The worst parts are over, but a great deal more must be done.

"There are two main reasons why Von Rundstedt was sealed off from achieving what he was after. The first of these is the good fighting qualities of the United States soldier and the second is allied teamwork.

"He [the American soldier] held out at Eisenborn, then south of Monschau [the 1st, 2d, 99th, and 30th infantry divisions] when the great blow hit him and he stopped those SS [elite] panzer divisions.

Fought On Tho Isolated.

"At St. Vith many United States troops were cut off and isolated but in little groups they fought and held on to those vital road junctions, forcing the Germans to halt. It was a very fine performance that the 7th armored division and 106th infantry division put up.

"On Dec. 20-21 I consulted Gen. Hodges [United States 1st army commander] and suggested we must get those fine fighting men out of the St. Vith area and back in our lines.

"The 82d American air borne division moved forward and got in contact with these elements and we pulled them back behind our lines. Then we ordered the 82d back to better positions but they did not want to come and they protested, but I assured them they had accomplished their mission and could withdraw with honor.

"I take my hat off willingly to such men."

"Pulled a Fast One on Us."

Montgomery said the Germans still were "fine soldiers" and formidable enemies. He cited the Jan. 1 attack of the German air force on allied air fields as an example of German potentialities, saying "the enemy pulled a fast one on us."

The field marshal, in contrast with his press conferences last summer, declined to go into any predictions as to how long the war would last, or to estimate German capabilities.

He disclosed that the British 6th air borne division is one of the British units fighting along the western tip of the Belgian bulge.

Von Rundstedt's picture has joined that of Rommel in Montgomery's personal pictorial hall of enemy fame. "I used to think Rommel was good," Montgomery said. "But Von Rundstedt could 'knock him for six.' He [Von Rundstedt] is the best general I've come up against in this war." Montgomery's habit of keeping a picture of the late Field Marshal Rommel always before him has been famous since the North African campaign.

Before the conference, members of Montgomery's staff rushed about the room ordering correspondents to put out their cigarets, since Montgomery never permitted any one to smoke in his presence. But the first thing the field marshal did was to relax this rule, saying he wanted every one to be "friendly and comfortable." He also announced that nothing he was going to say would be off the record.

ADMIRAL TELLS ATHENS MISERY AFTER CIVIL WAR

Americans of Greek descent were told by Greek Adm. Alexander E. Sakellariou yesterday of the starvation and misery which people of Athens are enduring after the civil war which left the city in shambles. He spoke before the Hellenic club at a meeting in Thorne hall on Northwestern university's downtown campus.

He suggested professional young men and women volunteer to go to Greece to help rehabilitate the country and urged the 300,000 Greeks in America to send relief, medicine, clothing, and food to Greece.

Sakallariou, a former Greek vice premier, asserted the ELAS leftist force, which opposes the British and Greek government troops, represents only about 10 per cent of the population. He commended the intervention of Britain and Churchill and said Great Britain "has no intention of interfering with the way in which normal and tranquil Greece carries on its affairs."

RESCUE GUNNER HANGING HEAD DOWN FROM B-29

SAIPAN, Jan. 3 [Delayed] (AP).—A Super Fortress gunner, sucked out of his gunblister almost four miles above Japan today, dangled from the plane head down for five minutes before other crew members could pull him back.

The gunner, Sgt. J. R. Krantz, Hickory Point, Tenn., would have plummeted from his bullet shattered gunblister save for a rope looped around his right leg. Three crewmen, including 2d Lt. H. W. Wittee, Niantic, Ill., bombardier, crawled back and pulled Krantz to safety, unconscious.

Sgt. R. B. Angell, East Dubuque, Ill., administered blood plasma and before the plane reached its base Krantz regained consciousness. He suffered severe frostbite from exposure to 38 degrees below zero temperature, but was otherwise apparently unharmed.

BOMBERS BLAST WEB OF GERMAN SUPPLY ROUTES

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP).—Two great fleets of R. A. F. bombers, totaling probably more than 1,000 planes, bombed Munich twice tonight within two hours. The raids on the Nazi shrine city followed up great daylight blows against Germany by 2,100 American heavy bombers and fighters which poured 3,000 tons of explosives on assorted transport targets.

The first wave of the R. A. F. raiders over Munich poured incendiaries and explosives into the important city of southwest Germany at 8:30 p. m. The second wave struck shortly before 10:30 p. m.

As the allied winter aerial offensive went thru its 16th day more than 1,400 Britain-based Fortresses and Liberators of the United States 8th air force escorted by nearly 700 Mustangs and Thunderbolts attacked five freight yards, two Rhine bridges and six railyards between Hamm and Karlsruhe. Rail yards at Rastatt and Aachen on both sides of Karlsruhe were hit.

Battle Thru Blizzard.

The sky train fought thru blizzards with the temperature 50 degrees below zero. Nine of the bombers and one fighter were reported missing.

A Mustang fighter group, led by Capt. Donald Penn of Superior, Ariz., ranged as far as the Bremen area and destroyed or damaged 10 locomotives and more than 54 freight and oil tank cars.

Snow and an icy mist masked the front and held support of continent-based tactical planes to a minimum.

The R. A. F. made a night assault by 1,000 heavy bombers with escorting night fighters on the German industrial center at Hanau, 10 miles east of Frankfurt; Neuss, an advanced railway hub west of the Rhine, and other supply facilities in western Germany. The night fighters strafed air fields. The raids cost the R. A. F. 10 planes.

Smash 7,000 German Trucks.

U. S. 9TH AIR FORCE HDQ., France, Jan. 7 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, commander of the United States 9th air force said tonight his fighter bombers had destroyed or knocked out 7,000 German trucks and 1,000 tanks during 12 days of the battle in the Belgian bulge.

In addition he said his planes had shot down 500 Nazi planes and destroyed 3,000 freight cars. He said Field Marshal Von Rundstedt at the height of his offensive had between 20,000 and 30,000 vehicles.

Air force activity, Gen. Vandenberg said, was equivalent "of four divisions on foot at a time freedom of movement was imperative to the Germans."

In the 12 days of favorable weather during the current offensive the air force made 15,000 sorties and lost 201 planes.

FLYING BOMB HIT KILLS 7, FLATTENS HOUSES IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP).—Several incidents of hits by flying bombs—in one of which at least seven persons were killed—were disclosed tonight as Berlin declared the intensified shelling of Greater London with V-2 "flying telephone pole" rockets had gone into the fourth day. One V-bomb hitting a residential street in southern England killed seven, seriously injured others, and flattened houses. Eight were injured in their houses by another bomb, and the blast damaged a near-by church. Still another bomb falling in a garden injured 10 persons.

Crowd Moscow Cathedral for Russian Christmas

MOSCOW, Jan. 7 (AP).—Thousands of worshipers walked thru the snow last night to Moscow's great Bogoyavlensk [Apparition of God] cathedral, where Metropolitan Nikolai celebrated the Christmas eve service. The Russian church calendar was never changed to conform to the state calendar, hence today was observed as the anniversary of Christ's birth by members of the orthodox faith.

CARRIERS BLAST LUZON; INVASION NEAR, SAY JAPS

Claim Huge U. S. Fleet Shells Coast.

18 Japanese planes destroyed on the ground in the attacks on Clark field north of Manila. Liberators also hit Nichols and Nielson airdromes the same day.

Mitchell bombers blasted four airdromes on Negros Island, southeast of Mindoro, from which Japanese planes have been harassing the convoy lane between American held Leyte Island and Mindoro. One Mitchell was lost to ground fire.

JAPS PREDICT LANDING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Tokyo radio yesterday reported American warships are shelling the coast of western Luzon Island, at Lingayen gulf, concentrating fire on the San Fabian area and "apparently planning a landing there."

The broadcasts, based on frontline correspondent reports and headquarters bulletins, said the naval task force penetrated Lingayen gulf Saturday [Friday, U. S. time] and that 32 American war vessels, including six carriers and 18 transports, had been sunk or damaged by Japanese fire.

"Super-heavy" guns firing from the Japanese fortresses of San Fernando, Bauang, Damortis, and other points on the Lingayen gulf coast are "sending up a terrible barrage," Tokyo said, in "the hottest reception ever recorded in the annals of the war on the oncoming enemy convoys."

Sight Three More Convoys.

"The whole area of Lingayen gulf is now detonating with the fiercest bombardment of the beach fortresses and of the enemy surface units, as well as from large carrier-borne bombings," the broadcast added.

Three other "enemy convoys" are operating in Philippine waters, the radio said, all apparently bound from Leyte Island to Lingayen gulf.

The Japanese "have completed a solid structure of defense" on Luzon, the radio added, and "are awaiting the enemy with resolute determination. Therefore, it is anticipated that a great enemy annihilation battle will be unrolled as soon as the enemy steps ashore."

70 Warships Lined Up.

An earlier Tokyo broadcast said "more than 70 enemy warships are lined up single file" in the gulf, with fighter planes repeatedly dive-bombing and strafing Japanese shore guns.

"After one concentration of warships of the enemy task force departs, another concentration appears and continues unceasing shelling," the report added.

The radio quoted an official bulletin which reported other "powerful enemy convoys" observed Saturday cruising westward south of Mindoro Island and in the Mindanao sea, in the southern part of the Philippines.

The bulletin also claimed that Japanese air units from Wednesday thru Saturday had sunk or damaged 32 ships, including three aircraft carriers, one battleship, two battleships or cruisers, one cruiser, and 16 transports sunk; three carriers, two battleships or cruisers, one large warcraft of unidentified type, one destroyer, and two transports damaged.

Report 150 Transports.

The report of three other convoys headed toward Luzon classified them as a task force of undisclosed size west of Mindoro; a convoy of 150 transports south of Mindoro, and 25 war vessels south of Negros Island. It was not clear whether these were the same convoys mentioned in the earlier bulletin.

Lingayen gulf, 110 miles north of Manila, is one of the points where the Japanese invaded the Philippines in December, 1941. They lost thousands of men killed and wounded to Filipino and American rifle, machine gun, and artillery fire before driving ashore with sheer weight of numbers.

"Will Need 10 Divisions."

The correspondent of the Tokyo Asahi said a successful American landing would require at least 10 divisions and be backed by ships aggregating 2,000,000 tons.

The Tokyo radio referred to the United States carrier planes raids on Formosa and Okinawa last Tuesday and Wednesday with the explanation that the strikes were intended to "cut off our supply route to the Philippines."

"Moreover, by bringing the British fleet to the coast of northern Sumatra," the broadcast said, "the enemy has begun to show undisguised and inordinate ambitions to attack Luzon Island."

Succors Wounded

HONSHU ISLAND RAIDED 3 TIMES BY B-29S: TOKYO

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Three separate flights of single American Super Fortresses over the Tokaido area of southeastern Honshu Island, during which incendiaries were unloaded in the regions of Nagoya and Hamamatsu, were reported by Tokyo radio in a broadcast yesterday.

The broadcast claimed damage was "extremely slight." The Japanese said the B-29s were over the Tokaido district Saturday night and at dawn Sunday.

The radio claimed three B-29s were shot down and more than 10 damaged by interceptors during Saturday's raid on western Kyushu Island.

CIO Aid Attacks Work Draft; Lauds Labor Record

The proposed compulsory labor legislation was attacked yesterday by Michael Mann, executive secretary of the Chicago Industrial Union council [CIO], who branded it as "a patent medicine formula with a fancy name guaranteed as a cure-all for industrial headaches." He added: "The miracle of production wrought by American volunteer labor is now a matter of record. It cannot be bettered by a system of compulsion."

GAINS POSSIBLE BEYOND BELGIAN SECTOR: LANZA

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

Before the German counter-offensive began Dec. 16, the general opinion of the allies was that the Germans had opposing them about 70 divisions. Many of these were rated as much below strength, six had been "destroyed" in the battles around Aachen, and more than that had been reduced to weak organizations.

If the German strength really does not exceed some 70 divisions, and more than half are in the Belgian salient, there seems to be no great danger to be expected from new major German attacks, either north or south of the salient.

20 Divisions for Defense.

The writer has doubts as to the accuracy of the allied estimate. He also suspects the German statement, voluntarily given, that more than a half of their troops are in the Belgium salient. Why make this public?

For a purely defensive job, the Germans should not need more than 20 divisions to hold a 125 mile front. This would give them 15 divisions which could be sent elsewhere. This was all they seem to have had to start their offensive on Dec. 16.

Whichever side can first assemble a sufficient number of divisions for a major effort either to the north or south of the Belgian sector will have an opportunity to make considerable gains.

2,000,000 Allied Troops.

In September, the allied estimate of German strength on the west front was 30 to 35 divisions, believed to be weak, and short of equipment after their disaster in France. The number of allied divisions available at that time has not been made public. It has been disclosed that more than 2,000,000 allied troops had by then landed in France.

That would indicate that at least 50 allied divisions were present. All were superbly equipped and trained. Had it been possible to keep on going the Germans might then have been defeated and the war ended.

As it wasn't done, the Germans retired to their west wall and waited three and a half months until they had organized themselves for new campaigns. The allies hadn't believed this to be possible. They were taken by surprise when the German attack came. New German divisions have appeared; new weapons; improved 1945 models of tanks, bazookas, planes, and other equipment.

How Many Nazi Divisions.

What is not known to us is how close to winning did the allies come? How many men and divisions has the German army in all? The 1945 models, appearing in large quantities, are fair proof that German industry is producing despite the intensified bombing campaign.

The necessity for bombing German railroads almost every day casts doubt as to whether they can be definitely interrupted. There are so many railroads in Germany, with so many cross connections, that detours can be set up while a line bombed out is repaired.

A popular idea that the Germans were greatly outnumbered and outclassed on the western front may not have been entirely correct. It probably was so in September, and the Germans say that it is still so. Maybe much less than before.

Allied Strength Superior?

According to allied figures since September, the number of German divisions opposed to them has been at least doubled. The allies also received reënforcement during this period. Was it as much? How much allied superiority is there now?

It would be desirable to know whether the German increase in strength has been fully reached. Or is it still growing? If so, to what extent and how fast?

Questions such as these are usually assigned to G-2 [intelligence] sections of the general staff. The events of Dec. 16 indicate that up to that date they had not correctly estimated the German strength.

New Divisions to Strike?

The present campaign in Belgium, German announcements say, is just one of the blows to come. Is this just talk? Or are there more German divisions in training, which may appear suddenly in some new major operation?

The general situation is such that careful watch for developments should be maintained. The allies are doing it. The Germans are probing at what they believe are likely places for a chance to start something again.

A study of Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's campaigns indicates that he starts with a prepared plan, which is followed as long as it works. He then shifts to some new plan. The original German invasion into Belgium seems to have been stopped.

It is to be expected that, if he has divisions available, he will soon launch an operation on another sector, unless he is prevented by the allies doing the same thing first.

ALLIED FIGHTER UNIT IN CHINA BAGS 80 JAP PLANES IN A WEEK

CHUNGKING, Jan. 7 (AP).—An American bulletin from an advanced China air base today said:

"A single fighter group of Maj. Gen. Chennault's Chinese-American wing, under command of Col. T. Alan Bennett, on Jan. 5 claimed the most successful week in its history by destroying 49 Japanese planes in an attack on the Hankow airdrome in central China.

"The attack brought the fighter group's total of Japanese planes destroyed in six days to more than 80, making the week one of the most disastrous of the war for the Japanese air force. Ten of the Japanese interceptors were destroyed in the air and 29 fighters and 10 bombers were destroyed on the ground."

Laborite Leader Opposes Stalin's Stand on Poland

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP).—The British and American governments "cannot in any circumstances agree to the decision taken by Stalin regarding Poland," Arthur Greenwood, Laborite member of parliament and leader of the opposition in the house of commons, said today in a speech at Dewsbury. "This must be the last big war in the world, and whether it is depends a good deal on the way the British government behaves in dealing with the problems now beginning to shape the future," he added.

RUSSIANS ADMIT RETREAT 20 MI. FROM BUDAPEST

Report New Bridgehead in Czechoslovakia.

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP).—Moscow announced tonight that German counter-attacks northwest of Budapest had forced the Red army to evacuate Esztergom, on the Danube 20 miles from the devastated capital, but reported establishment of a Russian bridgehead 12½ miles deep on the west bank of the Hron [Garom] river farther north.

The soviet bulletin broadcast from Moscow said that Nazi tanks and infantry ordered to the relief of the trapped Budapest garrison had driven into the ancient cathedral town of Esztergom in bitter fighting and that when soviet troops withdrew they left piles of German dead and wrecked tanks.

Gain 116 More Blocks.

The Russians also reported that their drive to annihilate the surrounded Nazi forces in Budapest had captured another 116 blocks of buildings, giving them control of more than 1,800 of the capital's 4,500 blocks.

The Russian forcing of the Hron in southern Czechoslovakia had been intimated earlier in broadcasts from Berlin. The soviets said their drive in this sector overran nine towns and villages.

Moscow said that in the continued fighting northwest of Budapest the Russians repulsed attacks by large German forces which were striving, despite heavy losses, to break thru to the capital.

The push across the Hron put the Red army within little more than 60 miles of Bratislava, considered the gateway to Vienna, and 95 miles east of Vienna itself.

Hint Action in Poland.

German commentators declared the battle of Budapest was "approaching its climax," but dwelt more on hints of large scale action in Poland.

There has been a sudden and marked flare-up of soviet shock troop and patrol activity in the big Russian Vistula bridgehead west of Baranow and about 120 miles south of Warsaw, Col. Ernst von Hammer, German military commentator, said in a broadcast from Berlin.

BRITISH HARASS ELAS RETREAT FROM ATHENS

Clash with the Leftist Rearguards.

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 7 (AP).—British armored units clashed today with ELAS rearguards protecting the withdrawal of the left wing forces into the hills west and northeast of Athens as the Greek civil war entered its second month.

In the Elevsis area, 15 miles west of Athens, 63 ELAS fighters were killed and 44 taken prisoner. Ammunition and machine guns were captured by the British. RAF cannon-firing planes damaged 36 trucks in strafing an ELAS column retreating from the Athens area.

Settlement of the bloody discord seemed further removed with an announcement by Lt. Gen. Ronald M. Scobie, commander of British forces in Greece, that the previous truce terms offered the EAM-ELAS forces had been withdrawn and that the British would insist that any future agreement must include fair treatment for ELAS-held British prisoners.

Charge Holding of Hostages.

Both the British and ELAS have accused one another of holding "hostages" and the British have officially accused the ELAS of diverting Red Cross relief supplies to their armed forces.

The government of Premier Nicholas Plastiras meanwhile added two new ministers—John Macropoulos for agriculture, and Prof. C. Amandos for education. Neither is identified with the EAM, thus continuing a policy of proscribing EAM participation in the national government.

Scobie in a message to Archbishop Damaskinos, the regent, said:

"It is my happy duty to inform you the cities of Athens and Piraeus now virtually are free of insurgent forces and citizens dwelling in this area may proceed in peaceful and lawful occasions."

Commander Captured.

Some 200 ELAS, who stayed behind in Athens and the port of Piraeus when the ELAS forces pulled out have been rounded up. Included in the group was the commander of the 2d Athens ELAS brigade.

[Laborite Joseph Kenworthy (Lord Strabolgi) told an audience at a Birmingham council of labor meeting in England yesterday that the "Greek situation had worsened" since the recent visit to Athens of Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden and "unless there is an armistice and a real endeavor to find a peaceful solution in Greece before parliament reassembles support of the labor party for war time coalition will be strained to the breaking point."]

REDS ASSAIL U. S. PAPERS BACKING POPE'S MESSAGE

MOSCOW, Jan. 7 (AP).—Pravda denounced "the reactionary American press" today as "friends and protectors of Hitlerites."

The Communist newspaper's editorial praised the Bulgarian trial of alleged war criminals and said:

"Masses of people in countries liberated from the Hitlerites clamor for retribution. The Hitlerites hope for indulgence thru the protection of their friends in democratic countries, so they later may prepare their own revenge.

"They have friends and protectors indeed. Let's examine, for instance, the way some American newspapers used the pope's Christmas message.

Cites Three Newspapers.

"The pope's message was aimed to distract the minds of believers from the vital question of war and peace. The New York World-Telegram offered an article about 'the claims of the pope for a fair peace' and the 'guarantee of equal rights to defeated nations and vanquishers.' The Washington Evening Star attempted to prove 'no permanent distinction should be made between conquerors and conquered.' These newspapers as well as the New York Sun swore that Pope Pius XII is a determined protector of democracy.

"If democracy means support of a fascist regime [which is mentioned with indignation by many American and British newspapers] the pope is a democrat.

"The reactionary American press deduced well enough what the Vatican meant by a fair peace. The Christmas message of the pope was used by pro-fascist elements to cloak vile actions of Hitlerites under church authority."

Pravda also attacked the publisher of the English magazine Nineteenth Century for an alleged statement that the "task of allied statesmen is to conclude a victorious peace with Germany before Europe is destroyed."

EDITORIALS QUOTED.

The New York World-Telegram said editorially Dec. 26:

"Without joining the advocates of a soft peace, the pope insists that the settlement be just. In this he follows the Atlantic Charter. While 'chastisement' can be inflicted on the aggressor by the society of states, 'so that war will always be subject to the stigma of proscription,' the defeated peoples should have hope of equal rights 'commensurate to their effective collaboration'."

The Washington Evening Star said editorially Dec. 27:

"The pope sees the hope of the future in the restoration of the concept of human dignity and responsibility in both the peoples and their leaders, chosen by democratic methods. He sees the process carried onto the international plane by an association of nations. . . . That association must be universal, based upon the principle that mankind is a spiritual unity. This implies that the world must be guided by the principles of even-handed justice to all, with no permanent discriminations between the present victors and vanquished. Thus, and thus alone, can the current catastrophe be constructively terminated and the world's wounds healed."

"Nuts," Says Editor.

Lee Wood, executive editor of the World-Telegram, said in New York that "Pravda's outbursts, which are becoming more common and irresponsible of late, do not merit any comment; to take notice of them would only dignify this irresponsible thinking."

Keats Speed, executive editor of the New York Sun, declared: "I think the best answer to Pravda's article is the one Brig. Gen. McAuliffe made." [Brig. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe replied "Nuts!" to a German demand that his besieged troops surrender in the Bastogne area.]

The Washington Star did not comment.

GIRL SWALLOWS POISON.

Miss Anna Gavrinski, 20, a waitress, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Gavrinski, 1028 Park av., North Chicago, was recovering yesterday in St. Theresa hospital, Waukegan, from the effects of poison which she swallowed early yesterday in the Happy Hour club at S. Genesee and Lake sts.

DENIES WINCHELL REPORT BYRNES HARBORED 'NAZI'

New York, Jan. 7 [Special].—The Blue network interrupted a broadcast tonight to report a denial made on behalf of War Mobilization Director Byrnes of a charge made by Walter Winchell, gossip columnist and radio speaker, that Byrnes had harbored an alleged Nazi sympathizer in his home.

Winchell, in his Sunday broadcast, asserted that Ernest F. Elmhurst, one of the 26 persons accused in the Washington sedition trial that ended on a mistrial, had rarely attended the trial, but instead got himself a job working in the Shoreham hotel apartment of Justice Byrnes. The columnist said the case showed "how careless some of our biggest government men are."

Interrupting a later program, the network broadcast a statement from a spokesman for Byrnes which described Winchell's report as "an inexcusable falsehood." The spokesman said "Justice Byrnes has never heard of this man named Elmhurst and furthermore has never had any man working in his apartment."

Last Oct. 29 the New York Times reported, without contradiction, that Elmhurst "was recently found working as a night waiter in a leading hotel" in Washington.

SEEK EX-CONVICT IN EVANSTON WOMAN BEATING

Evanston police yesterday were searching for an ex-convict and parolee from Stateville penitentiary as the assailant Saturday of Mrs. Ruth Randall Mayer, 34, wife of Carl G. Mayer, vice president of Oscar Mayer & Co., packers, in the Mayer home at 2247 Orrington av.

Police said they had learned that the ex-convict had been involved in the delivery six weeks ago to the Mayer home of a radio, which later proved to have been the wrong radio. The error, rectified the next day, was referred to by the woman's assailant to gain entrance.

Mrs. Mayer yesterday was reported recovering in Evanston hospital from a beating administed by the intruder, altho her eyes were still swollen shut, and she was unable to be questioned by police.

On the theory that Mrs. Mayer's assailant may have been the same man who killed Mrs. Lillian Galvin and her maid, Edna Sibilski, in the Galvin home in Evanston more than two years ago, insurance investigators of the Hartford Insurance company, who have been investigating the Galvin slaying, yesterday turned their attention to the Mayer case.

GUNS ROAR, BUT WHEEL SPINS ON AT MONTE CARLO

Chips Click as Yanks Die Seven Miles Away.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Dec. 30 [Delayed].—Seven miles away in the Italian Alps, freezing American soldiers are being killed and maimed by deadly stone fragments from shattering German artillery fire.

Here in the casino the newly rich, made so by collaboration with the Nazis and dealings in the black market, crowd around the gambling tables wagering staggering sums in paper francs.

Watching the gamblers staking $600 bets on every turn of the wheel and every flip of the cards, one loses all consciousness that a deadly war is being waged beyond the Italian frontier, almost within sight of the terrace.

U. S. Shells Are Seen.

Just after nightfall the lights blinked at a heavy detonation. The booming revolved into a growl as the projectile hurtled thru space.

But the gamblers merely sucked on their American cigarets costing $3 a package and nervously fingered the counters before them.

I stepped outside into the famous terrace. Three distant flashes far offshore indicated where an American warship was throwing shells into Nazi positions. They were accompanied by a roar like the 20th Century Limited.

Presently came distant crumps and flashes of orange light, where German batteries slammed shells into the mountain positions of American troops.

Back in the casino the players placed their bets unconcernedly and the roulette wheel spun again.

Monte Carlo's clientele today is vastly different from before the war. No Americans are present. It is off limits to Americans. There are no British, Germans, Italians nor Russians. The players are all French, except for a few Spaniards, Turks, and Greeks.

Old Splendor Gone.

There is a shabby air about the casino and the old time splendor has disappeared. The carpets are threadbare and the one time impeccably black clad croupiers now wear shiny alpaca jackets and soiled white shirts. The attendants, formerly in ornate livery, have patched kneebreeches and cracked shoes.

The female players no longer are ermine and mink coated, adorned with backless evening gowns and fettered with pearls and diamonds. The males no longer are in immaculate evening dress, monocles, and patent leather pumps.

Today the gambling is chiefly done by beady-eyed, corpulent gents in sack suits, sweaters, and American army shoes. Their girl friends wear sheepskin coats over knitted dresses with cork-soled slippers and gigantic turban shaped chapeaux. Their vermilion-tipped fingers and toe nails are the sole vestiges of glamor.

Rooms Are Chilly.

The casino, whose rooms once were so hot that one nearly stifled, now is scarcely heated, and only the chill is taken off the air because of the lack of coal.

The corps of ancient, withered, little women, who formerly eked out an existence by playing minimum stakes and picking up sleepers—forgotten bets—has disappeared.

With inflation, the higher cost of living and the depreciated franc, the smallest bet now is 10 francs [20 cents]. Nobody knows where the mittened, rusty black clad women with high button shoes have vanished—but they are gone.

Bars Are Deserted.

The sporting club for the wealthlest players has been closed since the war and only the public rooms remain open. The casino bars, which sell whisky at $3.80 per drink, are deserted.

Just before the midnight closing a violent crump shook the cut glass chandeliers, raining down dust as a German shell struck an American position in the hills near-by.

"They better be careful or they'll violate Monaco's neutrality," a swarthy winner grunted as his fat fingers caressed a stack of blue chips worth 100,000 francs [$2,000] apiece.

TUOHY VACATES ANTI-GAMBLING SQUAD AID'S JOB

Scholler Losing His Place on Staff.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

One of the first official casualties of the government's edict against horse racing is Edward N. Scholler, 833 W. 71st st., chief investigator of the state's attorney's anti-gambling department, it was learned yesterday. Scholler's job is abolished by order of State's Atty. Tuohy who took office a month ago.

Scholler's authority in the state's attorney's office under the last administration of Thomas J. Courtney was superior to that of Capt. Daniel Gilbert and Lt. Thomas J. Kelly, city policemen attached to the prosecutor's office. Gilbert has the title of chief investigator but several years ago, due to friction with First Asst. State's Atty. Wilbert F. Crowley, according to office reports, Gilbert was relieved of the task of investigating gambling complaints.

Former Court Bailiff.

Scholler lives in the 18th ward, for which State Sen. John M. Lee is Democratic committeeman. Courtney formerly lived in this ward and Scholler's political allegiance was to him, altho before being appointed boss of Courtney's gambling squad Scholler was head bailiff in the Criminal court. In that job he was under Sen. Lee, who is assistant sheriff.

Scholler had a well kept card index system pertaining to Chicago and Cook county gambling resorts. In recent trials of police captains he testified and produced records showing he had a corps of men who made numerous visits to gambling houses and frequently made bets. The investigators brought back to Scholler the tickets on which they lost money. If they won they cashed them and made a new bet, they testified.

Courtney's Policy Recalled.

It was Courtney's policy to refer all gambling complaints—in recent years—to Scholler who first notified Police Commissioner Allman of the location, then watched to see what the police did about the complaint. Scholler's men did no raiding. Courtney had discontinued the policy of raiding when he transferred gambling jurisdiction from Gilbert to Scholler.

While State's Atty. Tuohy hasn't made any public announcement of his intentions it became known he intended to rely on city police to do city police work.

The recent stoppage of horse racing as a war measure presumably rendered Scholler's job an unessential occupation and furnished the occasion for his being eased out. No explanation was made by Tuohy. Scholler was told to wind up his department this week.

British Cities Record 5,000 Fewer Deaths Last Year

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Britain's fifth war year was the healthiest in the war and one of the best in its history, it was disclosed tonight. Official figures for London and other big cities in England and Wales for 1944 showed 5,000 fewer deaths than in 1943 and 29,123 more births. Deaths due to diphtheria declined by 4,500 and there also was less typhoid, paratyphoid, scarlet fever, influenza, measles and whooping cough.

A 'NATIONALIST' PARTY LAUNCHED BY REYNOLDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7 [Special].—Former Sen. Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina today announced the formation of a new political organization—the nationalist party.

Reynolds, who headed the powerful senate military affairs committee, long has opposed the President's foreign policies.

"The Democratic party was first taken over by the New Deal, which in turn was taken over by the Communists, reds and pinks; interventionists and internationalists, together with the CIO political action committee," Reynolds said.

"Neither of the two major political parties is big enough to hold both interventionists and non-interventionists, nationalists and internationalists, Communists, and anti-Communists."

Reynolds said his new party would be developed thru the previously organized American nationalists' committee, with headquarters here.

CONGRESS WARY OF F. D. R.'S PLAN TO DRAFT LABOR

May and Austin Doubtful of Quick Action.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—President Roosevelt's demand for a national service act "at the earliest possible moment" appeared tonight to be headed for tough sledding in congress where similar proposals in the past have been turned down or permitted to die in committee.

Sen. Austin.

Sen. Austin [R., Vt.] co-author with Rep. Wadsworth [R., N. Y.] of a service bill that died in the senate military affairs committee, said he doubted such legislation will be enacted unless President Roosevelt gives it his active support.

Rep. May [D., Ky.], chairman of the house military affairs committee, said he would consult members of his committee about such an act but that the committee probably would wait to see whether the reclassification and induction of 4-Fs will solve the man power troubles.

Hearings to Start Soon.

May, whose bill to force 4-Fs to work where they are most needed or go into the army in labor battalions without receiving any of the benefits given other military personnel, such as insurance and mustering out pay, said the committee will start hearings on it soon, possibly Tuesday.

"I think we should utilize the 4-Fs first and if we do that then it is likely there will be no need for a national service act," May said. "There are more than 4 million men who have been deferred and if we get a million from this pool our man power troubles should be solved."

Consider Drafting Women.

May also said that while he "hated to see women drafted" his committee probably will consider a measure to draft trained nurses for work in army and navy hospitals. Mr. Roosevelt, in his message to congress Saturday, said 20,000 nurses are needed. He said voluntary recruiting has not produced enough and asked congress to amend the selective service act so they can be drafted.

"I understand there are hospitals where one nurse cares for about 26 beds, and with casualties mounting each nurse probably will have to care for 50 beds unless we get these 20,000 additional nurses," May said. "And drafting them seems to be the only way."

Austin, ranking minority member on the senate military affairs committee, asserted that unless the administration establishes the need for a national service act "there probably will not be any such legislation." He recalled that altho Mr. Roosevelt asked for such an act last year he did not give the measure much support and that heads of executive agencies failed to agree on the need for such a law.

Labor Not Enthusiastic.

Labor's reaction to the service act proposal has not been clearly defined, altho AFL President William Green issued a statement saying that organizations of industry and agriculture have joined with labor in opposing compulsory service because of a deep conviction that it would not be practical or helpful to the war program. He said labor still is reluctant to approve or support legislation which provides for compulsion.

The CIO did not consider a national service act at their convention last fall, but they previously had voted against it. However, a spokesman said today the organization's position might not necessarily be one of opposition. He said a meeting of the executive committee might be necessary to determine the matter.

Labor draft proposals and War Mobilizer Byrnes were attacked in the magazine Labor, published by 15 AFL and independent railroad unions. The article was written before Mr. Roosevelt's message was delivered and was aimed at Byrnes and his recommendation of last Monday that congress consider measures to keep 4-Fs in essential war jobs.

Nurse Groups Favor Draft.

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Representatives of two national nurses associations today approved President Roosevelt's request for a national service act.

Katherine J. Densford, president of the American Nurses association, representing more than 178,000 registered nurses, said in a statement "the President's message will result in an immediate increase" of volunteer nurses.

Stella Goostray, chairman of the National Nursing Council for War Service, in a telegram to the President, said "we indorse your call for a national service act."

Corporal's Wife

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 7 (AP).—Three boys, first triplets born in St. Louis since 1941, are "doing fine" at Booth Memorial Women's hospital, attendants reported today. The babies were born yesterday to Mrs. Frank Wiedeman, an army corporal's wife, at her apartment. The attending doctor tucked the babies in a dresser drawer for their ambulance ride with their mother to the hospital.

4 RINGS WORTH $3,000 HUNTED IN PLUMBING PIPES

Four diamond rings valued at $3,000 yesterday formed an elusive treasure trove somewhere in the plumbing of the three store apartment building at 1209 Madison pkwy. in which Mrs. Hattie Warshawsky resides.

The rings were lost Saturday when Mrs. Warshawsky's daughter, Phyllis, 8, threw them down the toilet. Before the mother could grab her, the child flushed the bowl.

Workmen tore out two drain traps and dug a 4 foot hole in the building's basement to get to the sewer inlets, but no trace of the rings was found.

$40,000,000 GAIN IN VET PENSIONS IN '44 REPORTED

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—Pensions for soldiers disabled in the present war cost $40,513,789 more in 1944 than in 1943, the veterans administration said today.

At the end of 1944, the administration said in its annual report, 208,519 World War II. veterans were getting pensions for service connected disabilities, with approximately 7 per cent of them totally disabled. The average pension is $30.67 monthly.

One person, Mrs. Esther Ann Hill Morgan, 87, of Independence, Ore., daughter of John Hill, a private in the war of 1812, is receiving a pension as a result of that conflict. Ten veterans of the Civil war are being cared for in veterans hospitals and 383 of them are getting pensions.

NEW DRAFT RULE CALLED THREAT TO FARM OUTPUT

A sharp drop in food production in Illinois and the nation was predicted yesterday by Illinois farm leaders and officials as a result of the selective service order for examination as to physical condition and reason for deferment for all deferred agriculture workers, beginning next Monday.

The new order—issued in the face of a need for a 25 per cent increase in food production despite heavy drains by war industry and the armed services—will reach into supplies of beef, pork, corn, soy beans, and dairy products, the Illinois spokesman said.

Fears Immediate Cut.

C. A. Hughes, Cook county farm adviser, criticized a statement by President Roosevelt that the farm workers are needed more urgently in the army than on the farm.

"The new order—even if it takes only a few men who are really entitled to deferments—will result in an immediate cut in production," Hughes said. "Even if all the deferred farm workers in the nation were taken, the total would not materially help the army. But on farms, strained to capacity, the need for men is vital. Northern Illinois was hit hard and early by the closeness of attractive jobs in war industry. Production was kept up and even increased only by a 90 hour work week and the help of women and children."

Most men now on the farms, it was explained, are "all year round men" as distinguished from migrant workers and those hired during the growing season. Many farms have only one hired man and depend on him during the winter as well as the summer. Drafting of these men will lead to hardship, it was said.

Beef, Pork, Milk to Be Hit.

Paul Johnston, state superintendent of farm labor, said in Urbana that the beef, pork, and milk supplies will be hit first, if any appreciable number of farm workers taken.

"We got by last year by working longer hours and by a tremendous increase in the amount of exchange of farm labor and machinery as well as the most favorable harvesting season we've had in years," he said. "But now 11 per cent less hired labor is available than a year ago in Illinois. With favorable weather, we will get the field crops in. But there is a shortage now of cattle, hog, and dairy workers."

He pointed out that younger and older members of farm families have helped keep production up by aiding the few men left. The number of men likely to be affected by the draft order is not known, he said, because each case is judged on individual merit by local boards. He expressed a hope that the boards will administer the regulation carefully.

Leonard Expects Drop.

Howard Leonard, director of the state department of agriculture, confirmed other predictions of crop reductions.

"Generally speaking, a crop reduction will be in sight if the farm labor supply is further depleted," he said. "Many factors, including the weather, enter into a prediction. My guess is that new inductions will reduce major crop harvests. There will be fewer cattle fed, fewer hogs raised, and reductions in corn and soy bean crops. It is likely that the dairy industry will be one of the first to feel the tightening of an already acute shortage."

In Du Page county over the weekend farms were trading help to get routine chores such as milking done, H. S. Wright, Du Page county farm adviser, reported.

COSTLY FUNERAL A RARITY, REPLY OF MORTICIANS

Deny Charges of Federal Council of Churches.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

Chicago morticians yesterday cited statistics to refute charges prepared by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America that the costs of burials have become exorbitant and that both clergy and laity are complaining about the high cost of funerals.

The church council made its charges in a bulletin published by its department of research and education. The article asserted that competition in the funeral business is not one of price but for possession of the bodies. It cited United States department of commerce figures showing that the average price of a funeral rose from $313 in 1936 to $405 in 1942 [altho it had been $410 in 1929]. Morticians apply high pressure salesmanship and push prices up on the bereaved when their resistance is lowest, the article charged. It added that studies made in 1921 and again in 1928 showed that "funeral expenses among the poor and middle class are out of all proportion to those prevailing among the well to do."

Say Average Cost Is Under $300.

The morticians here yesterday denied all the charges.. They said the charge their business is one of "competition for bodies" is "too sordid and unwarranted for reply."

They presented figures based on thousands of funerals to show that most obsequies cost the bereaved between $200 and $300, that 25 per cent of them cost $200 or less, and that more than 75 per cent of all funerals cost less than $500.

Incidentally, it was asserted that the publicized "$10,000 silver casket" in which the late Dean O'Banion was buried was a $600 box of sheet iron sprayed with a metal alloy and given a proper polish—and that the "funeral didn't cost over $1,000." The only person actually buried in a $10,000 couch, the morticians said, was Edsel Ford, whose body a Detroit [Mich.] funeral director, at the family's request, buried in a 2,000 pound casket of solid bronze, cast in one piece.

Cites 27,781 Funerals in 1943.

Funeral prices do not include the cost of the grave or cemetery lot, of cremation, or of monuments. They do, however, include singers, an organist, use of a hearse and a limousine.

Wilbur M. Krieger, executive secretary of the National Selected Morticians, made public figures for 1943 covering 27,781 funerals and showing that prices in 57.8 per cent of them ranged from $175 to $425. The mean price was between $275 and $300.

A chart showing the range of costs thruout the country, based on 19,845 funerals in 1941, was made public by Maynard C. Weller, executive secretary of the National Funeral Directors' association. The figures included professional services, embalming, and direction of staff, use of funeral home, facilities, and equipment; a hearse and one limousine, but did not include charity or veterans' cases or those of children under 10 years. The chart follows:

Under $100....	8.7%	$400 to $499..	8.0%
$100 to $199..	24.3%	$500 to $599..	3.7%
$200 to $299..	30.5%	$600 to $699..	2.0%
$300 to $399..	21.9%	$700 and over..	1.2%

$300 Most Popular Price.

A Chicago undertaker—one of the city's busiest—disclosed that out of 3,753 funerals conducted by his establishment, 393, or 10.5 per cent, cost less than $110; 599, or 16 per cent, cost $110 to $200; 736, or 19.6 per cent, cost $201 to $300. Above this figure both the number and percentages began dropping, as 646, 17.2 per cent, $301 to $400; 586, 15.6 per cent, $401 to $500; only 133, 3.5 per cent, cost more than $700.

Average prices charged by the smaller establishments in Chicago were given by Funeral Services Associated and the Chicago Funeral Directors' association as follows: Under $100, 10 per cent of all funerals; $100 to $200, 22 per cent; $200 to $499, 57 per cent; $500 to $1,000, 10 per cent, and $1,000 and above, 1 per cent.

Chicago morticians pointed out that the churchmen said $560,900,000 was spent in 1942 for funerals, cemeteries, crematories, and tombstones, while the total of all gifts and bequests to religion was $720,800,000.

Objects to Including Monuments.

Weller in a letter told Dr., F. Ernest Johnson, director of the federal council's department of research and education, who made the charges, that:

"Charges for cemeteries, monuments, and tombstones are not applicable to funerals. May we inquire why these figures for 1942 were quoted and the 1 billion 232 million dollar item for 'religious and welfare activities' omitted from your report?"

Weller said federal council leaders replied it would stand behind its charges, but evinced a desire to discuss the problem with representatives of the morticians.

ILLINOIS TO GET 23 MILLION IN U. S. ROAD FUNDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, federal works administrator, tonight announced Illinois will receive $23,119,873 in the apportionment of the first half billion dollars of the 1½ billion voted in the federal aid highway act of 1944.

In general the federal funds will be matched with state funds. Under terms of the act, 100 million of the 500 million may be appropriated immediately by congress, the rest to be voted when the President proclaims the end of the war emergency. The 100 million will be used to finance surveys and plans and construction and to purchase of rights of way for projects.

Of the total apportioned for Illinois $8,847,357 is for the federal aid highway system, $4,761,820 for secondary or feeder roads, and $9,510,696 for urban highways. Apportionments for other Chicagoland states are: Indiana, $12,090,463; Iowa, $11,139,077; Michigan, $16,638,432, and Wisconsin, $11,770,486.

MAYOR PREDICTS COALITION BENCH TICKET FOR JUNE

Subject Is Discussed, Republicans Say.

Mayor Kelly, who is Democratic county chairman, said yesterday that he expected the two major parties would present a coalition ticket for the judicial election June 4, when two vacancies are to be filled in Circuit court and probably three in Superior court. It is necessary for Gov. Green to declare a special election for the Superior judgeships, but he is expected to make the call and set it for the date fixed for the Circuit court election.

"We haven't gone into discussions with the Republicans, but coalition seems the reasonable thing to do," the mayor said. "Unless there is coalition, the Democrats will put up a solid slate."

Five Bench Vacancies.

Under coalition, the 10 Democrats and the eight Republicans on the Circuit bench would be placed on the ticket. The five vacancies would be shared between the parties, probably three places going to Democrats and two to Republicans. Republican leaders said there was talk of coalition, but that no definite steps had been taken.

Among Democratic possibilities for the vacancies, former State's Atty. Courtney was reported to be in high standing with party leaders, including the mayor. This raised the question of the chances of Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant under Courtney and still in that post under the new prosecutor, William J. Tuohy.

Crowley was said to have been persuaded not to run for prosecutor and to look forward to a place on the judicial ticket. An influential Democrat said yesterday that whatever might have been the case Crowley hardly could expect to get on the June ticket if Courtney also is placed, as there are too few vacancies.

John Tuohy Mentioned.

Another spoken of as having won the mayor's favorable notice is John M. Tuohy, older brother of the state's attorney. Altho he never has participated in politics, he is reported to have the support of several strong elements in the party.

Talk among the Republicans has made Elmer J. Schnackenberg, former speaker of the Illinois house of representatives, their leading candidate for one of the vacancies if coalition is effected.

A SUBSERVIENT NEW YORK BREWS AMERICA'S WARS

Britain Influences Even Its Education.

BY ALEX SMALL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 7.—The wars—or better the world saving crusades—of the United States are to a great extent brewed in New York. Here we confront intangibles like emotions and states of mind, which are translated into policy, or better into action. Again, on analysis, this intangible is something not special to New York, but New York is the decisive factor because it is a focal point.

This intangible may be briefly called colonial mindedness. Impolitely, but accurately, it could be called subserviency to the British.

This is something quite different to the activity of any "foreign" pressure group which makes so much futile noise about the wrongs of suffering Poldavia. There is no specific British group either in New York or elsewhere. Subserviency to Whitehall is diffused among the population and takes in virtually all the prosperous native born, even ones of Irish, Scandinavian, or German ancestry.

Go to Finishing Schools.

You may see this influence in education. The rich and socially established, or socially climbing, of New York do not send their children to the big local think-factories. The daughters go to the finishing schools near the city, maybe on to one of the acceptable colleges, [Smith, Vassar, Wellesley, Bryn Mawr]. The sons, often following an alumnus father or even grandfather, are sent to Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Williams, Trinity [at Hartford], or Amherst.

Even Yale and Harvard have become socially depreciated since they have grown so big and for a generation have been admitting nobodies. The essential, of course, is not the college but the club, and in the clubs Yale's and Harvard's sheep can be kept apart from the goats. Just the same, promiscuity in classrooms is regretted; it is conceded that in keeping up tone, Princeton does better, and Williams surpasses even Princeton.

It is significant that by the beginning of the last war, all these eastern institutions were becoming dubious, even ashamed, of the type of organization they had borrowed from Germany. The prejudices of war finished it, and they turned to the "house" system of organization for undergraduates, a copy of the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge.

Makes Them "Gentlemen."

The primary task of these institutions is not, of course, to give the students learning, but to make them "gentlemen," and the ideal of the gentleman is British—an ideal which incidentally is getting very ragged on its home soil. British ways and ideas are presented, with a deceptive show of fairmindedness, as not exactly perfect, but as near so as humanity can get.

This might be merely ridiculous, this obtuse snub to great millions, like Chinese or Indians or Arabs, not to mention the continent of Europe, who all had civilizations long before there was a Britain. It becomes serious when its corollary is admitted—that American ways are good only so far as they are imitation British. Anything else is "foreign," and the word as used by these Americans has about the same intonation and implications as if used in England itself, where it is synonomous with "ape."

Returned from his college, the young alumnus plunges into Wall street. He joins his university club and other clubs. He is in constant association with people of the same cast of mind. He is joined by all the climbers, the Wendell Willkies, who abdicate all native independence to conform to the dominant snobbery, to become "one-worlders," as run by the "Anglo-American community."

Dominates State Department.

This disposition, widespread as it is in the United States, can be seen at its best in New York, because here it is concentrated. The press of the city, or at least its stuffed-shirt section, voices this point of view. It dominates our state department, which is recruited largely from this stratum of society. I have seen officials of this department who came from Illinois and Nebraska and who by servile imitation had become worse than the New York or New England originals.

Some of these powerful clans, which exercise an influence out of all proportion to their numbers, are allied by marriage with the ruling class of Britain. Nothing fascinates them so much as a title or "blood." Roxburgh, Westminster, Marlborough—some of the oldest and proudest titles of Britain—have been worn by New York women. As the rich of other centers imitated New York, there were cases like Lady Curzon of Keddleston, who came from Chicago.

Seldom does this class actually get hold of the White House, but it has done it twice in this generation; with the two Roosevelts it has controled American foreign policy for 19½ of the last 43 years.

Gossip of the Court.

This ignoble snobbery always provokes the amazement and often the contempt of the people it is meant to flatter. When Martin Chuzzlewit came from England to make his fortune in the land of opportunity, he visited a prominent New York family to which he had a letter of introduction. He was dumfounded to find that the young ladies of the family didn't want to talk about their own country or even city; they wanted to get from him the gossip of the court and the smart set of London. When they found out he had no title and was not related to any one who had a title, they had no use for him.

That's fiction, if you will, and a century ago, tho I'm sure Dickens had a basis for this scene in direct observation. But here is one I can give you first hand:

One day this last year I had to go to see a very high officer of the British navy, so high he may be said to operate on a global scale. During the conversation he called my attention to the similarity between his name and that of a very high ranking officer in the United States army. Omitting Gen. Marshall, think of the most publicized names on the Washington front, and you'll probably get it right the first time. The Britisher went on to me thus:

"You know, our names aren't merely similar; they're the same. I just use a more modernized spelling. And when we met, he told me we were of the same family. He'd investigated it all—told me the whole family history, the different places they'd lived in England, and all that. Showed me coat of arms, too; he'd dug it up; even had it in his house. Can't understand that. Charming fellow, of course, clever and full of bright ideas, like all you Americans, but how do you explain this rubbish about coats of arms and family history?"

May Lose Its Position.

We might, to close, speculate on the future of New York.

There is good reason to think it may lose its overshadowing position in American life. Already much of it looks like a hangover from the horse and buggy or early automobile ages. Hollywood has robbed it of the position of the only entertainment center in the United States. With the radio and the coming of television, New York will have only the ancient "legitimate" stage to uphold its prestige.

No other place seems likely to supplant it as the financial market so long as the game is played by the present rules. But the rules have been changed considerably since 1933. If they change still more, if the republic becomes more totalitarian ["communist" if you like], the money manipulators will go where the money is, which will be Washington. In two generations Wall street may be preserved as a historical monument, where the young can come to feel superior, much as the soviets have preserved the palaces of the former empire.

In pure size New York may retain first place for a long time. That will follow the trend of our times for all big cities to demobilize. A century from now there may be no such things left as a city, as we know it; there will just be stretches of more or less urbanized countryside. So long as they keep their shape Manhattan might well remain our biggest.

As for the prejudice against New York, that will likely remain also. It rests on an ancient human basis. It is significant that today the most expert vote getter Americans have ever known, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who is a New Yorker of New Yorkers, subtley has divested himself of that quality, and stands before the people as the country squire of Hyde Park. That is far enough from Manhattan to take the curse off him.

Al Smith was just as much a New Yorker—of a different stratum. But he did not conceal nor apologize. He went out into "transHudson America" as the boy from the Fulton Fish market, and even in Oklahoma he wore the brown derby of the Bowery.

Take your choice:

New York is a cancer on the otherwise sound body of the United States.

Or it is the mightiest achievement of our people.

[This is the last of Mr. Small's articles on New York City.]

THE LABOR DRAFT.

Mr. Roosevelt says he wants a labor draft to win the war, which up to Nov. 7 he wanted the voters to believe was virtually won. He wanted a labor draft last year, and congress thought his arguments for it unconvincing. His present reasons are, therefore, of interest.

"There are three basic arguments," he says, "for a national service law.

"First—It would assure that we have the right number of workers in the right places at the right times.

"Second—It would provide supreme proof to all our fighting men that we are giving them what they are entitled to, which is nothing less than our total effort.

"And third—It would be the final, unequivocal answer to the hopes of the Nazis and the Japanese that we may become half-hearted about this war and that they can get from us a negotiated peace."

The last two arguments can be considered jointly. We are told that the way to convince our enemies and our own armies that we are in earnest is to permit Mr. Roosevelt and his burocrats to beat us over the head a little harder than they are already doing. We are supposed to be suffering from complacency and the cancellation of ration stamps to offset the Nazi breakthru at Christmas time was not enough to change our mood. We are supposed not to know there's a war on. We never read the casualty lists, or receive telegrams from the adjutant general.

Incidentally, it hasn't been the failure of more people to go to work in war plants that has angered and embittered the soldiers. It has been the conduct of the people already in the war plants, the strikes, slowdowns, and absenteeism of some of Mr. Roosevelt's CIO pets.

The primary argument for "national service"—a labor draft—is that with it we shall have "the right number of workers in the right places at the right time." As evidence, Mr. Roosevelt offers reported shortages of various type of munitions. He carefully avoids mention of the billions of dollars' worth of surpluses, some of which are already being liquidated, and the bulging warehouses all over the country.

Those surpluses were accumulated by the same people who would supposedly put labor in the right places at the right time. Is there any reason to believe that the Roosevelt burocrats would be any more efficient and effective in allocating slave labor than they have been in buying the right war materials?

Already fearsome measures are being hinted at in Washington, pending the enactment of the labor draft. Men who refuse to take war plant jobs are to be drafted into the army. They won't get veterans' benefits. They won't fight. They will be, in some burocrat's phrase, permanent kitchen police, assigned to so-called work battalions.

The army hasn't said it has any use for work battalions. The men might as well be in jail for all the good they will do the prosecution of the war. They are, by this account, to be given their choice of signing up with Sidney Hillman and sitting out the war in some munitions plant, or of being inducted into the army where they will neither fight nor help sustain the civilian economy.

And for many of them, if a labor draft is passed, their compulsory employment would literally mean sitting out the war. Strikes and absenteeism are not the only reasons why war production suffers. Some unions are still applying peace time limitations on production, designed to spread employment, in times of war man power scarcity. Mr. Roosevelt has done nothing to end that. Neither has he done anything to stop the hoarding of labor in some war plants, of which there is considerable evidence. Instead of making efficient use of the present labor supply, he would put more people to work under the same wasteful conditions.

War plant labor is not fully efficient, but American labor is still the most efficient in the world. It outproduces, by far, the workers of both our allies and our enemies. It does so because it is free labor. Mr. Roosevelt would sacrifice this advantage.

The plea for a labor draft is typical. Instead of seeking ways to increase the efficiency of the war plants and his procurement organization, Mr. Roosevelt aims to make a slave of every American citizen. It is the same old song. If he were only given more power, he wouldn't fall down on the job.

CREDIT FOR AUSTRALIA.

Percy C. Spender, a member of the Australian war council, says that Gen. MacArthur's communiques fail to give Australia due credit for what it is accomplishing in the Pacific because they refer to "our troops," "our bombers," and "our fighters." He proposes that the Australian commander in chief be empowered to issue his own communiques covering Australian activities.

This idea should be welcomed. Americans will sympathize with Mr. Spender because they have seen British publications slight American fighting in much the same way of which he complains. London papers have a habit of referring to Gen. MacArthur's American invasion of the Philippines as an accomplishment of "allied forces," altho the allies could not be discerned.

There is considerable curiosity in this country as to what part, if any, Australia is taking at present in the Pacific war. If the Australians are doing something, we would like to hear about it. There should not be any objection to Australia issuing its own accounting. Let's have some of these Australian units and their accomplishments identified. It would be heartening indeed to learn that the job of beating the Japs is a less lonely task than it sometimes appears to be.

GOOD HUNTING.

A man power shortage confronted the girls from Vassar and Smith, from Wellesley and Sarah Lawrence, when they arrived home for Christmas. The draft had swept the community clean of boys of their own age. For a time it seemed as if the only dates the girls could talk about when they got back to college were those which they memorized in the history courses.

The young ladies were resourceful, however, and found it possible to do considerable with what was available. They were able to see in a high school junior something that they never had seen there before. As between staying home and robbing the cradle, the choice was obvious and they had the determination, the sophistication, and the charm to accomplish their purpose. The holiday social whirl by all accounts was as giddy as usual for the college girls and their high school boys.

The usual playmates of these young men, the high school girls, had a season of neglect they have not known since childhood. They stayed at home while the boys were squiring others. There have been the expectable consequences. Some fraternity pins have been given back, and girls are addressing boys they have known from childhood as "mister." One Senn junior, who was passed up while her boy friend was rushing a senior from Madison all thru the holidays, intends to say to the young man on some suitable occasion, "I hear you took out your mother New Year's eve."

The man power shortage, it appears, will be only partly relieved by the return of the co-eds to their studies. One evening last week, Johnnie, an 11 year old boy rather large for his age, went into one of the residential hotels to buy an early edition of THE TRIBUNE for his father. In the lobby some one was playing the piano. When Johnnie stopped to look at the Christmas tree for a moment, a woman came up to him and said, "Pardon me, sir, but do you dance?"

STALIN'S ANSWER TO MR. ROOSEVELT.

It wasn't kind of Comrade Stalin to recognize his Lublin quislings just on the eve of Mr. Roosevelt's address to congress on the state of the nation. Mr. Stalin's action mocked Mr. Roosevelt's words and no doubt the moment was chosen precisely with that purpose in view. Bolshevik diplomacy delights in delivering the kick to the pants when everybody is looking and the embarrassment of the victim will be most acute. At any rate, Mr. Stalin has now informed the American people and anybody else who may be interested that so far as Russia is concerned, the Atlantic Charter doesn't exist.

In his address, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated his story that the principle of self-determination and the principle that no nation shall be aggrandized thru the war are found in the charter not because they are to be followed in making the peace, but because they are a general statement of aspirations to be achieved some time, maybe. Mr. Stalin replies that he will have none of it, now or ever.

And that reduced Mr. Roosevelt's words to sawdust. He argued, as often before, that our government must agree to guarantee the boundaries to be established in Europe before the peace treaty specifying those boundaries is written. Stalin isn't going to yield on Poland or anything else of the sort, and England isn't going to depart from her policy of dominating the Mediterranean and various other areas. Mr. Roosevelt is saying that we must uphold these arrangements tho they are obviously unstable, obviously a violation of good faith, and obviously will lead sooner or later to another war.

The British and Russian governments found ways during the recent electoral campaign of letting the American people know that Roosevelt was preferred. The argument was that Mr. Roosevelt could be counted upon to commit the power of the United States to maintaining the peace of Europe and in these circumstances our allies could make a peace that would be inherently sound and durable. The argument was fraudulent as everybody should have known at the time and as everybody must know now. Yet Mr. Roosevelt goes on saying that we must sign on the dotted line, in advance, and accept the responsibility of suppressing the Poles and any other nation that struggles for its freedom. He wants to make it certain not only that we shall participate in the next war but that we shall participate on the wrong side.

It is difficult to believe that the senators will fail to see both the moral wrong and the danger involved in this proposal. Our country is committed to this war and will fight it to its conclusion in victory, but we are not committed to underwriting an unstable peace. The Atlantic Charter was never submitted as a treaty to the senate, and in consequence, anything said or implied there about world organization is not binding on the nation; but even if it were, the fact that the cardinal principles of the charter have been grossly and deliberately violated by the other principal signatories ends any contractual obligation on our part.

America wants peace, of course, and that is why the common sense of the country will resist Mr. Roosevelt's proposal to involve us in the wars that such acts as the recognition of the Lublin government foreshadow.

THEY WON'T BE TOO HUNGRY.

[Rocky Mountain News, Denver.]

Of all the controversies in Washington, the one on which we are most ruggedly neutral is over whether the chicken a la king inaugural lunch is to be paid for out of the inaugural expense fund or from Mrs. Roosevelt's household budget.

Either way, the invited guests will eat at the taxpayers' expense.

The President has ordered a simple ceremony. He will step out onto the White House back porch to be sworn in and prayed over, and to deliver his fourth inaugural address. The 5,000 lucky enough to get invitations to that ceremony presumably will stand around in the back yard to watch and listen.

The question naturally arises: Why feed any part of this multitude of high officials, diplomats, justices, congressmen, and members of the Democratic national committee and the 1000 club? It is not likely that many of them will be desperately hungry.

BOOKS AND BONFIRES.

A pre-war incident in Germany suggested that watching bonfires of books was one of Hitler's hobbies. His taste for this amusement may have abated, however, since Dec. 3, 1943, when an allied bombing attack seems to have wrecked Book City, a district in Leipzig where a large part of Germany's publishing and printing was focused. Swiss and Swedish accounts of vast destruction have recently come to the attention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

* * *

Before the rise of Hitler, says the A. A. A. S. Bulletin, Leipzig's Book City contained about 550 publishers, 320 booksellers, and 150 concerns engaged in both book publishing and selling. "From Swiss reports it appears that about 90 per cent of Book City was destroyed, including not only books and manuscripts, but also types, prints, stereotype plates, printing presses, and printing stocks of all kinds, altho it is probable that much of such things had been removed to a place of safety." The writer of the article believes that this was one of the greatest destructions of books in the history of the world.

* * *

The books of Leipzig ran strongly to translations into the major European languages, and so became familiar over the world. Travelers who were hungry for reading in their native tongue could pick up Leipzig imprints in any large city. The Baedeker guidebooks, started in 1801, have been a Leipzig product since 1872.

* * *

Leipzig held an international book fair every year [between world wars, of course] in a large exhibition hall which was also a museum for bibliophiles. In 1937 its publishers' association commissioned American bibliographers to write "The Book in America: A History of the Making, the Selling, and the Collecting of Books in the United States." It is a handy tool for librarians and other professional bookworms.

SOLDIER'S REQUIEM.

(For C. S., killed in action.)

And Death pipes on her maniac dance,
And calls as partners men like him
Who lies now in a lightened France
He helped undim,
Tho he was young.

And War beats loud his brazen drum
To call men to his crowded mart.
One scarce can hear the weeping from
A mother's heart
In anguish wrung.

And Life's tide-wave of strife and toll
Sweeps past the land where scattered are
The remnants of a vibrant soul—
A Silver Star—
A song unsung.

Old Fashioned Winter, Farm Style.

It was very cold in our farm kitchen, but I was snugly wrapped up in a feather bed just off the kitchen and did not mind.

Mother arose first and there came sounds: rattling stove lids, rustling corn cobs, the metallic clunk of the kerosene can, the striking of a match, the roaring of fire in the stove. Then there was a sudden smash as she broke the ice in the tin pail holding the family drinking water.

When the stove was warm I would dash for the kitchen to dress, taking care not to burn myself on the hot buttons of my clothing, which had been hanging on the nickel-plated rail above the open door of the oven. The teakettle sent forth its song and white vapor, which froze in fantastic designs on our windows.

When I was dressed we would seize the teakettle and dash thru deep snow to the old wooden pump, pour the scalding water down its throat, wait a bit, then work the handle as our breath curled around our heads in the zero cold. Then would come the water, with many a cough and sputter. We would take the pail of water into the kitchen to have a drink.

But where is the tin dipper that hung from a rusty nail on the wall? It is gone. Mother is gone, too. O, no, here she is, standing beside me as always she does.

"Come, step up on this chair, my boy, and I will give you a drink of water. Careful of the ice in it. O, my, you swallowed a lump of ice. Here, drink some more water and the lump will slip down."

I shall take a nice long drink of the cool water of Memory's Well, and I shall see. No, the lump did not "slip down." It is always there as I recall when we thawed out the old wooden pump.

PAPERWEIGHT WISH.

Here in this pale circumference
A placid child, garbed all in fragile green,
With pink-flushed cheeks and ever-dainty gaze
Stands still, eternal, in the virgin snow.

And with a bare flick of a lazy hand
The gentle flakes will all around her swirl;
And in the crystal globe which is her simple world
A minute blizzard whirls,
Then softly comes to rest upon the fragile girl.

Would that Gargantuan I could by some magic be Transformed, transmuted to that changeless ball
Where peace and snowflakes quietly abide,
Where storms may rise and all as suddenly abate;
And where this green-clad maiden, her pale muff
Close against her firm vermilion lips,
Forever stands at peace, until the end of time.

F. L. E. asks: "Is it still possible to volunteer for service in the maritime service?"

The maritime service will need more than 5,000 men a month this year to man the ships to get our supplies overseas. Men between 17 and 50 are urgently needed for training as deck and engine seamen, radio operators, hospital corpsmen, pursers, cooks, and bakers. We will forward data sheets on these programs to those requesting them, or application for enlistment may be made directly to the Maritime Service Enrolling Office, 844 Rush st., Chicago.

C. C. F. asks: "Can an officer on terminal leave wear civilian clothes, or must he remain in uniform?"

He may wear either at his discretion.

J. F. B. asks: "Can an officer's widow purchase things at an army commissary or P. X. such as at Fort Sheridan? Would the widow and child be eligible for free army medical care when and if it were available?"

The privileges extended to officers' wives at army installations are not available to the widow, and this includes medical care. Medical care is supposed to be covered by her pension.

PELLAGRA—A FOOD DEFICIENCY.

THE conquest of pellagra has saved more lives in some of our southern states than any other medical victory. It is a triumph that is scarcely a generation old. We owe to Goldberger of the United States public health service, whose report was published 26 years years ago, the true explanation of the ailment. It was his suggestion which brought forth the comment from the Japanese scientist, Noguchi, that the American's study was the most unscientific piece of work that had ever been made by any one. Nevertheless, Goldberger has been proved to be 100 per cent correct.

The cause, as every one now knows, is a food deficiency which can be relieved with dried brewer's yeast, liver extract, and nicotinic acid. Unless the malady is recognized and treated, it tends to become chronic.

The purpose of this discussion is to call attention to the fact that mild cases are likely to be overlooked. These individuals will be encountered not alone in the south but thruout the Union. Many a sufferer will not be able to determine when he first observed the manifestations. If the skin lesions are characteristic—namely, thickening and discoloration of the cuticle over the backs of the hands, forearms, knees, and the instep—we may assume that the illness is fairly well established. On the other hand, about all many will complain of will be intermittent diarrhea accompanied by vague digestive and nervous upsets.

The entire digestive tract, beginning with the mouth, may be involved. The tongue may be swollen, cracked, and beefy in shade. Ulcers may be exhibited. These symptoms, combined with alternating bouts of diarrhea and constipation, call for investigation. Even such episodes as burning in the stomach, abdominal distress or bloating may be early but significant indications. Only when the meals are analyzed carefully will the true situation be disclosed.

Sometimes the chief sign will be a scalding sensation of the tongue, with the appearance of tiny fissures at the angles of the mouth [cheilosis]. I saw one such patient a year or two ago. At first she was thought to be suffering from a toxic thyroid because her pulse was rapid. Lugol's solution made no change in her condition, but when she was placed on a diet which included a generous amount of yeast and liver, recovery was prompt and complete. In this instance there was neither diarrhea nor psychic disturbances. But it is reasonable to assume that they would have appeared if proper management had not been instituted.

After all, treatment is simple. The diet should be high in calories and rich in vitamin B2 [formerly called "G"]. In consequence, large quantities of milk, beef, chicken, canned salmon, pork, etc., will need to be supplied. Thereafter, nicotinic acid may be started. It should be given cautiously as, occasionally, flushing and a feeling of heat may prove annoying. But soon the dose may be increased with safety and marked benefit.

To the statement, "We never see pellagra in the north," one of my colleagues replied, "I saw one of the most typical cases in my experience in Detroit."

DON'T BLAME THE DRUG.

F. E. S. writes: Recently I have read of several victims of pneumonia who have killed themselves after being given the sulfa drugs. Will you explain?

REPLY.

In any illness with a high temperature, delirium may ensue. The sulfa remedies, by reducing toxemia, retard or prevent this manifestation. The principal thing to watch, in giving these chemicals, is the leucocyte count. The white cells may be decreased to an unsafe level.

SUSPENDED ANIMATION.

Mrs. C. writes: What causes loss of all emotional feelings? I do not love or hate any one, I don't get excited about anything, and nothing worries me.

REPLY.

Probably a mild depression which may stem from a toxin. A physical checkup may reveal the source of the poison. Calmness is a desirable attribute but it can be carried too far.

VARIOUS EFFECTS.

P. D. writes: What are the symptoms of a focal infection?

REPLY.

Trouble anywhere in the body, which may be remote from the nests of growing germs. For example, foci of infection within the mouth may disturb the kidneys.

Lines from a Seafarer.

Gleanings of a gentleman on a destroyer escort in mid-Pacific:

"Tokyo Rose is a daily feature on the radio out here, of course. Tokyo has some really excellent recordings which they have blandly lifted from the American broadcasts [Petrillo, please note], and Rose's chatter while she changes the platter is 'cherce' as one of our engineers from Brooklyn puts it.

"The scheme of her chattering, which she does with an amazing American flavor, is an attempt to undermine the American fighting man's faith in his girl or his wife back home. Rose has a very vivid imagination, and the goings-on-of-the-little-woman-at-home-while-we're-away, which she describes so lustfully, are startling indeed to the uninitiated. However, the whole idea, as far as achieving the effect desired by the Nips, is a gargantuan flop.

"The unromantic refuses to believe the old girl he left has that much appeal for even the oldsters at home, while the young and unattached become more anxious than ever to smash on to Tokyo and look up Rose herself. Says our Brooklyn engineers, 'Dat's some babe. She's been around. I goota see her.' Unknowingly Rose is building up a beautiful boomerang among the 'suckers,' as she so fondly calls us. To most of us she is just a nasty talking girl, and having in mind a quaint old American custom, we wonder how she will sound with her mouth full of soap."

"Bushido, as a code of honor, has a loop hole. A marine discovered it after his unit had wiped out a pocket of Japs. Rather, they thought it wiped out until one Nip walked out with his hands in the air surrendered. 'Hey,' yelled the marine. 'I thought you guys fought to the last man.' The prisoner hesitated, then replied, 'That is true. I am the last man.'

"A small mine sweeper, always short on fresh provisions, as are most small craft, knocked down a Jap plane with its AA fire. The admiral ordered a letter of commendation drafted for the captain and crew. The air officer called the young skipper to get the details and mentioned the forthcoming recognition. 'That's fine, sir,' the skipper said, 'but if it's all the same, we'd just as soon have some of that turkey you gave another ship last week.'

"Ours is the ship that received the 26 Smiths on board all at one time. Remember? All of them, Able thru Zebra, have lost their hair and at the moment are as bald as bowling balls. It is a strange disease, often contracted when 'crossing the line' [equator] and upon going thru the pains of being transformed from a pollywog to a shellback.

"A supply ship, about to return to the United States, discovered down in one of its holds a large quantity of a well known soft drink sirup. Time until sailing was short, so a message was sent to all ships in the harbor to send a boat if interested. The reaction was comparable to a State st. store announcing a sale on nylons. Boats came plowing thru the water from all directions, and it is rumored that the crews in some were armed. We got our share but almost lost our thirst for it when, by mistake, the first two gallons of our allotment turned out to be sirup for flapjacks.

"Christmas came to us in devious ways. It is often necessary for larger ships to pass mail at sea to smaller ships which are bound for a nearer port. Recently, during one of these transactions, we thought the mail from the larger ship to us was extraordinarily heavy. We didn't mind, however, when we discovered the last four bags contained cans of ice cream—gallons of it.

"After giving due consideration to the cigaret shortage at home and its effect on the ladies, the only practical suggestion from here is to dust off the title of a song popular in the flapper era of the '20s—'Roll 'Em, Girlies, Roll 'Em.'

"And there you are. Not much this time. Things are pretty quiet out here—in spots."

TAKE THE WAR WORK TO THE WORKERS.

Coatsburg, Ill., Jan. 4.—The attention focused on the "man power shortage" by Mr. Byrnes seems to be not so much an actual shortage of workers as a problem of getting them into production lines.

Coatsburg is a village of 185. Nearest war industries are in a small city 18 miles away. At present 12 war workers do daily shifts in this small city and three cars are used for transportation. They lose two hours a day commuting; three workmen formerly employed are idle at present rather than brave the elements or uproot home ties to go to other more distant communities needing their services.

Should some subassembly be located here—and there are three or four available buildings with power at hand—all 15 of these workers could be employed at home, saving 24 to 30 hours a day lost by the group traveling to and from the only present source of war work. In addition, by having an assembly line close at hand, housewives, several local men with small business establishments, and some rural help, could easily be recruited to staff an assembly line of 20 persons to operate three eight hour shifts. This would provide the output of five times as many workers as our community now supplies.

There are only two reasons why this plan is not followed: [1] Arguments are presented the transportation can't be provided for the materials. We have direct rail connections and necessary materials could be dropped here; or the gasoline and tires used by the three cars now commuting would provide adequate transportation by truck on a United States highway thru the village. [2] Machinery cannot be moved and installed. This may be true, but light assembly lines require little more than working space, light and power; these we have. Hundreds of items requiring much hand labor, but of small bulk, can be completed in this and thousands of other small villages.

Such planning would relieve the acute housing shortage caused by drawing in some rural workers to the larger centers; this would make living conditions better for the workers needed there for the heavy industries, which cannot be moved, and would result in a much lower labor turnover.

There would surely be a howl go up from the labor leaders should the government decide to sensibly adopt some such decentralization as would utilize this enormous untapped reservoir of labor. The reason, plainly enough, is that designing organizers could not bully and coerce these rural workers in the small units and force upon them all the limitations and restrictions that strangle production in some lines. Absenteeism would be low in such rural installations. You would understand why when you realized that the patriotic Americans who rallied to the call when the opportunity came went home, when their shift was over, to a house with a service star, or two, or three, in the window.

It isn't a question of shortage of potential labor. It is a question of distribution of war work in the areas where workers can be enrolled.

ALBERT SHANHOLTZER,
President, Coatsburg Village Board.

LUST FOR POWER.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—I am employed in a war plant, as are two of my relatives, in two other plants. None of these need new workers. In fact all three have had recent layoffs and the plans are now chiefly for reconversion to civilian production in the near future. The new idea of drafting the men in 4-F is just another Roosevelt grab for more power.

We have raised for Mr. Roosevelt the largest army and navy in history, but he is still dissatisfied and wants to get his claws into every man, sick or well. If it were entirely up to him he would have every man woman and child in America under some draft legislation. Yes, and in camps. If things were as bad as they appear to make necessary the passing of these new laws, why then was Mr. Roosevelt devoting all his time up to two months ago to making comical campaign speeches? Why wasn't he looking into these things then? He was very funny while our boys were dying overseas. Now that he is sure of the election he is clamping down again on the poor suckers over here.

We have sent out all of our able men and now are gathering together our halt and lame, and deaf and blind to satisfy the lust for power of Mr. Roosevelt. ALFRED C. JOERGER.

LOAFING ON THE JOB.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—I'm working in a factory at 100 per cent war work and it is disgusting to see the way people are loafing here. Of course, a man cannot be fired because he loafs. The union will back him up, and evidently the government backs up the union. We read about man power shortage, but why don't the men on the pay roll do a day's work?

After taxes and war bonds are deducted from my pay, I bring home about $45 a week. My family and I can barely exist on that. I thought the money we spent on war bonds would be used to fight the Nazis and the Japs. Instead, the government thinks it can afford to use the taxpayers' money and our army to fight honest, legitimate business. A WAR WORKER.

"ESSENTIAL TO THE WAR."

Chicago, Jan. 1.—If Mr. Roosevelt can take over a plant like Montgomery Ward as a producer of war material, then the government can take over a Chinaman's laundry because a soldier had a button sewed on his shirt there. MICHAEL DINEEN.

TOO MUCH LIQUOR.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—My wife frequents a tavern and gets drunk. She stays until it closes, not every day, but at least once a week. The next day she does not wake up in time to get the children to school. Is there any way of stopping a tavern from serving her liquor? J. M.

The Illinois statute forbids taverns from serving intoxicated persons and permits recovery of damages traceable to intoxication induced by the tavern purchases. If you wish to litigate, you should employ an attorney.

SENATORS PLAN FULL AIRING OF F. D. R.'S POLICY

Washington Echoes with Criticism of Speech.

foreign policy, if it can be called a policy, was extremely disappointing," said Mundt. "His whole course in the handling of our foreign relations appears to be based on the assumption that there is bound to be friction between the allied powers and that we have got to let it go at that and like it.

Should Command Respect.

"I cannot believe that the American people will accept that as a foreign policy befitting this nation. Here is the United States, the leading power in this war, contributing the largest volume of man power and material to the joint effort of the allies, saving Great Britain and Russia from defeat and making it possible for the united nations to conquer the axis powers.

"In this dominant position the United States under competent leadership would have no difficulty in commanding respect in Moscow and London for the ideals, including the Atlantic charter, for which American boys are fighting and dying in Europe and Asia. The President's statement of foreign policy or rather lack of policy is in effect a trumping up of lame excuses for his failure to wield the influence he possesses by virtue of America's contribution to the war.

"Mr. Roosevelt makes it evident that he has lost the ball in his dealings with Churchill and Stalin and has no hope of regaining it. Nevertheless, the American people will expect him to regain the ball in the forthcoming conference of the big three and restore the harmony vital to successful prosecution of the war."

Teheran Recalled.

It was at the Teheran conference a year ago that Stalin and Churchill got Mr. Roosevelt's tacit, if not express, consent to their plans for dividing Europe into British and Russian spheres of influence, involving Russian annexation of eastern Poland and the Baltic states and the sovietization of the Balkans. Critics of the President contend that thru control of the lend-lease purse Mr. Roosevelt possessed a bargaining power to protect Poland and other small nations from such depredations. Defenders of the President assert that Russia, if denied lend-lease, would have quit the war on terms of peace with Germany assuring the soviets the domination of Poland and other parts of eastern Europe.

Stalin had no sooner returned home than the chief American Communist, Earl Browder, mouthpiece of Moscow, hailed Teheran as a great soviet diplomatic victory, dissolved the American Communist party, and declared for the fourth term.

At Teheran, Stalin got an agreement to establish a second front in western Europe. The British and Americans came thru with their part of that bargain last June but Stalin defaulted on his part of the agreement. He halted his offensive in the Polish sector, shortest road to Berlin, until Churchill and Roosevelt should induce the Poles to accede to the cession of eastern Poland to Russia and accept a Russian sponsored Communist government. It was largely because of the Russian inactivity in the Polish sector that the Germans were able to amass the great force used in the counter-offensive last month which inflicted the worst defeat on the American army in its history.

In a desperate effort to induce Stalin to resume the attack on Germany, Churchill a few weeks ago urged the Poles to accede to Stalin's demands. Mr. Roosevelt followed in the Secretary of State Stettinius statement holding out inducements to the Poles to yield. He said that the United States would help in any transfer of populations incidental to the territorial readjustment and in Polish rehabilitation from the ravages of war.

3 VESSELS PLOW THRU BLUE ICE, PASS SOO LOCKS

Breaker Ready for the Battle Ahead.

BY CHARLES BALLENGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Saulte Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 7.—The three maritime commission cargo ships which the navy is attempting to bring to Chicago from Superior, Wis., passed safely thru the Soo locks tonight after two coast guard cutters had smashed a channel thru 12 inches of blue ice in the upper St. Mary's river. They tied up in the Saulte harbor for the night.

The convoy had had an all-night battle. It defeated the ice floes and windrows, which sometimes reached a height of six or seven feet and blue ice in eastern Lake Superior, Whitefish Bay, and the upper St. Mary's.

Cutters Clear a Way.

Several times last night the two coast guard ice cutters which were stationed in the upper St. Mary's river had to smash back and forth in front of the cargo ships to extricate them from threatening windrows. The ships suffered no damage from ice floes but they face a new challenge in the 10 to 12 inches of solid ice in the Straits of Mackinac.

Coast guard officers reported subzero temperatures of the last few days threatened to build up even higher masses of ice in the ship lanes. A strong west wind may build up windrows of ice at least 10 feet in height, they said.

The new coast guard ice cutter Mackinaw meanwhile stood on alert in the Sault harbor ready to go to the convoy's rescue. The Mackinaw, it is hoped, will be powerful enough to meet the test of the straits.

Comdr. Edwin J. Roland, skipper of the Mackinaw, said it is planned to get the convoy under way in the danger zone tomorrow morning. He refused to attempt the passage at night because of the possibility of collision.

Watched by Veterans.

Veteran lake sailors are watching this navy experiment with interest, for never before has navigation been attempted in midwinter.

Several British naval officers and ship building technicians arrived in Sault Ste. Marie today to observe the experiment and to examine the Mackinaw. If it is successful they will take back to England the American design for the construction of ice breakers.

The Mackinaw, with its 10,000 horsepower and revolutionary design, is the newest and most powerful icebreaker in existence. It was commissioned just two weeks ago and now is making its maiden voyage.

The cargo vessels were built by the Globe Shipbuilding company and the Walter Butler Shipbuilding company, of Superior and Duluth. Each cost about 2 million dollars and will carry 4,000 tons of freight. They will be used by the navy and the maritime commission for regular ocean duty. After reaching Chicago they will be floated with pontoons and sent down the Mississippi river to the Gulf of Mexico.

READS MEDICAL BOOKS BY PROXY WHILE ON LEYTE

The latest medical books and articles in the library at Billings hospital at the University of Chicago still are available by proxy to Capt. Peter L. Beal, 28, Chicago dermatologist stationed with the army on Leyte, P. I., who was mentioned in an article in yesterday's TRIBUNE written by Arthur Veysey, foreign correspondent.

Capt. Beal's wife, Cecelia, 1345 Rosedale av., who is a student at the Chicago Teachers' college, makes frequent trips to the library to take notes on a special type of disease following V-mail requests from the doctor.

Capt. Beal, a specialist in skin diseases and, before his enlistment, an assistant resident in dermatology and medicine at Billings hospital, is one of the happiest men on Leyte, Veysey wrote, because of the prevalence there of skin diseases noted only in the tropics.

"Peter wrote that knowledge gained in the army medical corps will be of tremendous assistance to him when he returns to civilian life," Mrs. Beal said yesterday. The captain is a native Chicagoan, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Beal, 617 W. 89th st. He entered the army in December, 1943, and went overseas last July with a medical laboratory unit activated at Camp Ellis.

CHARGES BRITAIN FORCED TURKEY TO HINDER JEWS

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Alex Wilf, executive director of the American League for a Free Palestine, said today he had information that Great Britain, by intimidation, compelled Turkey to halt issuance of transit visas to European Jews bound for Palestine.

Wilf said in a statement he had received word from Eri Jabotinsky, member of the Hebrew committee of national liberation who went to Turkey to arrange evacuation of European Jews, that the British had informed Turkey it was canceling a promise to give Palestine visas to the Jews arriving in Turkey.

Jabotinsky, Wilf said, also reported that Great Britain had asked Turkey to prevent use of ships for transporting refugees.

The wires hum. It's a "31" order—important instructions for a train soon to arrive and for which the conductor must sign. The station agent sets the semaphore. The red light flashes its warning. The train arrives and rumbles to a stop.

This is just one of many safety measures established by Union Pacific to assure reliable transportation of passengers and freight. War resulted in a tremendous increase in rail traffic. As might be expected, a large part of that traffic has been directed over Union Pacific's "strategic middle route" uniting the East with the Pacific Coast.

Through constant vigilance and tireless effort on the part of employes, thousands of men and trainloads of materials have been moved efficiently and quickly to aid the Allied cause.

The constant improvements in railroading—resulting in safe, efficient transportation—are due in large measure to the American system of encouraging workers to seek advancement through personal enterprise and initiative. Angeline Johnson Engaged to John D. Galbraith Jr.

BY JUDITH CASS.

At a cocktail party at home in E. Schiller st. yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. C. Wallace Johnson announced the engagement of their elder daughter, Angeline Loreane, to John Drummond Galbraith Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Galbraith of Glencoe. The party was given for friends of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson as well as of their daughter and her fiancé.

Miss Johnson attended the Girls' Latin school, Pine Manor, and the Career institute, and now is a provisional member of the Chicago Junior league. She made her debut during the 1940 season at a tea-dance at the Woman's Athletic club, a party similar to one which her younger sister, Joan, shared the day after Christmas at the Racquet club with Miss Anne Wilson.

Young Mr. Galbraith was graduated from New Trier High school and has just complted his course in the chemical engineering school at Yale university. He now is engaged in war work in Chicago. His only sister, Louise, now Mrs. Frederick M. Dierks, lives in Arlington, Va., with Ensign Dierks and their 8-month-old daughter, Suzanne Louise.

Here and There.

Tonight's opening of "Harriet" at the Erlanger theater will be a family reunion for the Telfer MacArthurs, who will take a few guests to the Chicago premier of the play, in which their sister-in-law, Helen Hayes, stars. Miss Hayes' husband, Lt. Col. Charles MacArthur, is expected for the opening from Washington, D. C., where he is stationed with the chemical warfare division of the army.

In the party organized by Col. MacArthur's brother and his wife will be their two daughters, Mrs. W. Newton Burdick Jr. and Mrs. Gustavus Babson Jr., and the latter's husband, Lt. Babson, who will be here on leave from navy duty in the Pacific until late this month. Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Swift, and Mr. and Mrs. Désiré Defauw. As soon as Miss Hayes is settled at the Ambassador East, the MacArthurs hope to entertain for her. Her children, Mary and Jamie, were with her for the holidays but now have gone back to boarding schools. Col. MacArthur has another Chicago brother, Alfred MacArthur of Lake Forest.

Chicagoans also will be interested in the appearance of Phyllis Renee Campbell, who plays one of the Stowe twins in the play, as she is a granddaughter of Mrs. Arthur E. Phillips of Winnetka. Mrs. Phillips will entertain for her granddaughter next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley G. Harris Jr., [Marian Short] of Glencoe are being congratulated on the birth of a second son last Thursday in the Presbyterian hospital. The child will be named Thomas Bartlett, the latter name for one of his forefathers who was governor of New Hampshire. The baby and his 4 year old brother, John Trumbull, are grandsons of Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey R. Short and Mr. and Mrs. Harris of Winnetka.

Wedding News.

Invitations are in the mail today for the marriage on Jan. 23 of Miss Ann Harvey, daughter of William S. Harvey Jr. of Glencoe, and Seaman 1st Class William Beck Morse of the naval reserve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hosmer Morse Jr. of Winnetka. The ceremony will take place at 5:30 p. m. in St. Chrysostom's church, with a reception following in the Woman's Athletic club.

Miss Harvey's sister, Mrs. Eugene B. Sydor Jr. of Richmond, Va., will be her matron of honor, and Miss Peggy Sheldon will be maid of honor. Also attending the bride will be Mr. Morse's sister, Marilynn, Miss Kay Lyon, Miss Barbara Allen of Birmingham, Ala., and Miss Eileen Josten of Northampton, Mass. Mr. Morse will be his son's best man. Young Mr. Morse is stationed at Navy pier, and he and his bride will live in Chicago following a short wedding trip.

On Toddy's Calendar.

A number of old friends of Ray Atherton, United States ambassador to Canada, will be at the speakers' table with him and Mrs. Atherton when he addresses the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at a luncheon meeting at 12:15 p. m. today in the Palmer House. Here to hear her father speak is Mia Atherton. Mrs. William B. Hale, whose Winnetka home was designed by Mr. Atherton; the Howard Linns, the Chauncey McCormicks, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Mrs. Alfred E. Hamill, Mrs. Phillip Miller, Fred A. Preston, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Joseph M. Boyer, the Canadian trade commissioner, and Stephen Hurley will be at the speaker's table. Mr. Atherton's subject will be "North America and International Affairs."

Parent Teachers to Seek More Efficient Use of School Leave

The Chicago conference of the Parent-Teacher association will urge discontinuance of sabbatical leaves and tightening of rules governing special military leaves and maternity leaves for Chicago public school teachers in a public hearing on the annual school budget today.

Reducing the number of these leaves would keep several hundred regular teachers on their jobs and eliminate the need for substitutes at a time when it is difficult to get substitutes. The schools have complained almost since the war started that substitutes on the eligible list refuse teaching work at small pay, and often for short periods, in favor of higher paying, full time war jobs.

School figures show that approximately 10 per cent of the 13,000 Chicago teachers are on leave. A PTA survey showed that in some elementary schools as high as 45 per cent are on leave. About 700 elementary teachers have leaves, 400 for maternity, and maternity leaves for grade and high schools combined were reported at 500.

Mrs. F. Russell Lyon, head of the Chicago conference, said the PTA recognizes the value of extended study on sabbatical leaves in normal times, but believes that the need for teachers overshadows this now.

The PTA favors regular military leaves for persons who go into active military or naval service, but most of the special military leaves, granted to permit husbands or wives to accompany their spouses on war duty, should be discontinued in the best interests of the city's school children, Mrs. Lyon continued.

The maternity rules should revert to the system used before 1939, she asserted. The present rule specifies that the place of a woman on maternity leave can be filled only by a substitute teacher and that the job of the maternity absentee will be held open until she returns.

Maternity leaves are for two years and after a few weeks back on the job a teacher may take a second maternity leave. Thus a substitute teacher may be employed several years in place of a regular teacher.

The PTA suggests, Mrs. Lyon said, that these substitutes be employed as regular teachers and that the woman with a maternity leave should be placed at the end of a re-employment list.

Substitutes would be more willing to work if they receive the increased pay and status of regular teachers, Mrs. Lyon said.

The PTA program has been suggested in letters to the board and to Supt. Johnson, she said, but will be reëmphasized at today's hearing.

Teen Age Style Contest Added by The Tribune

In response to letters from college and high school girls, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in its sixth annual American Fashions contest, will offer a special prize of $500 for the best dress or costume designed especially for teen-age girls.

Eight or 10 sketches of styles for teen-age girls will be selected from all entries. The designer of each will receive an award of $50. These designs will be made up into garments, at the expense of THE TRIBUNE, and under the direction of Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority and director of the American Fashions contest. One of these garments will be chosen for the special $500 award.

Altho all designs in this extra contest must be for the teen-age girl, any resident of the United States, irrespective of age, may compete.

The purpose of the extra teen-age contest is to encourage original and smart designs that will appeal to the style wise teen-age girl. Sketches may be of any type of outer wearing apparel suitable for introduction on the commercial market.

Altho designers of any age may enter the teen-age competition, it is an excellent opportunity for high school and college girls who have definite ideas about the kind of clothes they'd like for themselves to put those ideas on paper.

In past years, many young persons have gained recognition in the fashion world because of designs they submitted in THE TRIBUNE'S American Fashions contest.

All entries should be sent in by May 1 and should be marked "Teen-Age Group."

Copies of complete contest rules and entry blanks may be obtained by writing to the American Fashions, Teen-Age Group, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower, 435 N. Michigan av., Chicago.

Readers should remember that the teen-age contest is in addition to the general contest for which prizes of $5,000 will be offered. This contest began Jan. 1. Both the teen-age contest and the main contest close May 1.

Personal Traits.

A study of the education, aptitudes, and duties of the private secretary was made by Prof. Frederick G. Nichols of Harvard university in conjunction with the American Institute of Secretaries. Employers and secretaries were queried as to the relative importance of personal traits. The primary qualities, in order of their importance, listed by employers and secretaries alike, were: Intelligence, accuracy, personality, judgment, efficiency, loyalty, and courtesy.

Adaptability and executive ability were considered primary traits by the secretaries, while the bosses placed these qualities under the heading of "Secondary Traits." Also as secondary the employers named alertness, faithfulness, resourcefulness, and memory, while the secretaries added tact and poise to the list. Initiative was not considered a primary or secondary trait by either the employers or their secretaries.

A study of this kind should be helpful to the beginner. There is no guaranteed prescription for success, but an awareness of well-tested ingredients, mixed with common sense, taken in reasonable doses, should tend toward a healthy business career.

Contrast.

He takes me to dinner—
You took me, but "Dutch."
We go to a movie—
You don't care for such.
You seldom would call me—
He's thoughtful that way.
You just took me walking—
We go to a play.

You say I'm your friend.
For which does my heart yearn?
What use to pretend!

Honorable Mention.

As a stenographer at the South Works plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, I'm wondering if white collar readers would be interested in our No. 1 white collar girl here at the mill. She's an office manager, but also does all the directing of girl's activities and we have plenty of that. There's a bowling league of some 100 girls, a glee club [that's a story in itself, as the club is directed by Harry Walsh of the Northerners]; we had Christmas parties, enjoy sleigh rides, and in warmer weather steak fries and picnics. Catherine Kenny plans all these and has made South Works outstanding in girls' social activities. Perhaps people would like to know how we girls at a steel mill get along so well together and keep up our morale. The answer is largely—Catherine Kenny.

Experts Again Gather to See New Fashions

BY REA SEEGER.

Fashion writers from 65 American newspapers are gathering in New York for today's opening of the press week showings of spring fashions by American designers, with the New York Dress institute in charge of the affair. Everything is new, in color promotions, in silhouette, important shoulders, sleeves, what's left of a much worked-over waist line, and what's available in yardage for a skirt. The showings are presented to help create a new interest in American clothes designed expressly for American women.

The Dress institute is an organization of top flight American designers, enthusiastically aware of the future of American fashions. In two short years it has successfully staged, with swank and fanfare, two press showings each year. The press also cherishes the hope that American fashions are not just a temporary substitute for Paris styles.

Exciting new models will be sketched while being displayed on the runway. All the representative new ideas, colors, and important silhouette trends will be made public together with pertinent information and reactions of the fashion sleuths who watch the parades go by, with fingers crossed, hopefully certain American fashions are here to stay.

There's Never a Dull Moment in This Recital

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG.

Owen Berger, a Chicago pianist who gave a recital at Kimball hall yesterday afternoon, can never be accused of levity. His manner, his choice of program, his style of playing is earnestness itself, but unhappily it is of the deadly earnest variety.

Mr. Berger's previous recitals have either been devoted entirely to the works of Beethoven, or have given the major amount of attention to his favorite composition, the vasty "Hammerklavier" sonata. Yesterday he omitted the "Hammerklavier" and settled for another Beethoven sonata, the lovely one in E major of Opus 109. After paying his soberest respects to music of Handel, Schubert and Brahms, he even let down the bars to include Debussy's "Clair de Lune" and a Prelude in B flat by Rachmaninoff.

Mr. Berger is a curious phenomenon. He is not without talent, but both his musical perceptions and his technical command seem to be in a state of arrested development. Some of his inaccuracies and misconceptions are frequently nothing less than startling. Then again, in the most difficult and serious work on his program, the Beethoven sonata, there were flashes, especially in the great variations which rest on the same cloud capped heights with the last string quartets, of intimate and sympathetic understanding.

But the good moments in Mr. Berger's playing were sporadic and unpredictable, and the general level was plodding and labored. The Handel—a Passacaglia and a sonata movement—was dry and uneven, and the Schubert—Andante and Menuetto, Opus 78—emerged from under Mr. Berger's fingers as one of those circling tapeworms which Schubert often turned out between major inspirations, probably to keep his mind off his empty stomach.

None of the four Brahms pieces had either warmth or style, and in one of them the pianist became so involved that he was forced to resort to improvisation. The single Debussy number suddenly subsided into some nicely calculated tonal effects, but the concluding Rachmaninoff Prelude, an obvious bit of mock heroics, went off on the afternoon's widest tangent. Mr. Berger is nothing if not a surprising pianist.

On the Aisle

Rising and Shining.

Good news over the week-end was that boxoffice receipts doubled for "The Glass Menagarie" from the week before, a cheering circumstance to those who cherish the play and hope it sticks in Chicago, for all Broadway's hopeful angling. Otto Preminger, European actor and director now in Hollywood, was one of its delighted visitors, and a man from International Pictures was more than vocally pleased. He offered the play's backers all they have spent to date, plus $25,000, to take it to New York. This in return for a half interest in the play, which he would like to buy for Gary Cooper. Hollywood buys, according to the Dramatists Guild, are based on 24 New York performances, but 75 elsewhere.

Meanwhile, Eddie Dowling would like to stay right here and tinker with some more plays. He is expecting a new farce by Sean O'Casey, which George Jean Nathan likes, and in the meantime he tells a tale about his chief backer and co-producer, Louis J. Singer. Theatrically speaking, says Mr. Dowling, Mr. Singer was a virgin from Wall st. He 'knew nothing about show business and didn't pretend to. He invested in Dowling, who told him, "You are going to lose all your money in this play ["The Glass Menagerie"] but it will be a lovely failure, Laurette Taylor will be glorious, and people will say nice things about you."

After Mr. Singer had spent about $25,000, he wistfully asked to read the play. Several of his friends read it, too. He came to Dowling, chin on chest, and said sadly, "I didn't think you would do anything like this to me." But then he began to watch it grow from the printed page to the magic stage, and he couldn't get enough of watching Jo Mielziner work. He even offered a few suggestions. Dowling says in all his theater years he never knew a newcomer to catch on so fast.

Sad News.

Bad news over the week-end was the cancellation of Zino Francescatti's Orchestra hall recital because the French violinist received word that his brother was killed in action. Better news from the French front is that Raimi is playing Molière, Louis Jouvet is resuming his career, Danielle Darrieux is about to reappear, Mistinguette and Chevalier may soon make a joint appearance and Josephine Baker, of the French women's army, is busy with personal appearances and radio.

Notes.

It was a wrench to let "Oklahoma!" go, particularly after Master Sgt. Jerome Whyte, of the "Winged Victory" staff, took it apart and put it back together with watchmaker's precision. . . . "Embezzled Heaven" closed in New York Saturday and touring plans are waiting on Ethel Barrymore, who must have eight weeks' rest. . . . Mary Astor tried her luck last week in New York's "Many Happy Returns," of which the AP reviewer said, "It went along for three acts as if it were being pushed by a snail with a broken leg." . . . Note from a London letter, "'Mrs. Cheyney' was quite good, tho it showed the want of Roland Young and Ina Claire." What wouldn't? . . . Note on week-end wanderings: What a performance Hugh Marlowe is giving these nights in "The Voice of the Turtle"! More of this anon, maybe Sunday.

INSTALMENT I.

PARTY.

Larmar Jordan's study on the 14th floor of the Arday apartments at 10th st. and 5th av. had been pictured in House Beautiful. Its 30 foot expanse flowed out thru modern French doors to combine smoothly with a red flagstone terrace, bright now with four umbrella topped tables. A striped awning strung across the east end formed a sheltering bower encircled on three sides with green-boxed hedges, where five days a week, weather permitting, Jordan sat at his desk from 2 until 6 intent on the composition of novels which had brought him fame. ["Queen's Gambit," 1932; "Richmond," 1934; and topping a string of others, the latest, "Monsignor's Wife," 1943.]

A cocktail party was in session.

Comfortable in the embrace of a wide divan just inside the doors one of the guests, Capt. Duncan Maclain, set an empty cocktail glass on the end table beside him and fell into the delightful pastime of cataloging those present thru the medium of sound.

The captain was blind, had been for more than 20 years, yet reinforced with a streak of iron persistence, and urged on by his closest friend, Spud Savage, he had dismissed hopelessness as the refuge of a weakling. Searching for a difficult task to master, he had drawn on his experience as an ex-intelligence officer and turned to the most unlikely of all pursuits for a blind man—that of a private investigator.

He had been shot three times, but endless hours of rigorous training in firing at sound had made him an even more deadly shot in return. Well past 40, he still moved with the ease and sureness of a body in perfect trim, following his Seeing Eye dog, Schnucke, at a pace much faster than the normal walk of a man who could see.

A woman in a light gray sports suit swung in from the terrace with a long manly stride, stared at Maclain's well marked jaw, mobile face, and crisp dark hair, and after a moment sat down beside him.

"I'm Sarah Hanley, Larmar's agent. Aren't you being neglected, Capt. Maclain?"

"If I am, it's my own fault, Miss Hanley. I sneaked in here to get Schnucke away from the crowd on the terrace. People persist in feeding her canapes. She's weak——"

"But beautiful." Sarah Hanley glanced down at the German shepherd lying close to the captain's feet. "I'm really Mrs. Hanley—outside of the office, of course. You're engaged to Sybella Ford, aren't you?"

She gave him scarcely a chance to nod before plunging on. "She's charming. So clever! I never understood how any one could tell good antiques from fakes. I have terrible taste, really. Imagine making a success of an antique shop—or decorating any one's home."

"You seem to have made a success of picking good writers," remarked Maclain.

"But that's different." She laughed, throatily. "One just picks what one likes to read, then it's in the lap of the gods. Now I've always thought you could do a wonderful book, Capt. Maclain——"

Somewhere in the apartment a musical doorbell rang with a double chime.

Out on the terrace Sybella was chatting with Paul Hirst, Larmar's secretary. Cocktails raised her voice a trifle, but it never annoyed Maclain, who loved the friendly laughter of her tone. Hirst was a small precise man—not over five foot two, Maclain had judged from walking beside him. Like so many men short of stature his voice was booming and full.

Sarah Hanley was growing enthusiastic. "Now just take some of your adventures as a detective, Capt. Maclain. All you'd need to do is put them down. I mean simply write them down. It would——"

Soft footsteps crossed the study. The captain recognized the trained even stride of Harry, the Jordan's Negro houseman. He even sorted out from Sarah Hanley's gushing the pause of indecision as Harry opened the door.

"How do you do, Miss Singleton." There might have been surprise, even fear in the houseman's greeting.

"Hello, Harry!" There was no indecision on the part of the woman who came in unless it was a tiny edge of truculence, well covered by the pleasant timbre of her greeting. "Schooled," the captain thought. "A superb actress who has learned how to speak without offending the ear. If she let herself go she'd be shrill."

Miss Singleton sailed across the study leaving a trailing breath of fine perfume. She tossed a "Sarah, darling!" toward Maclain's companion, who broke her literary advice with a startled, "O!"

Suddenly the chatter on the terrace was very still to burst again with a redoubled vigor.

"You were saying——" prompted Maclain.

"Larmar's a fool." Sarah Hanley announced with feeling. "I wonder if he really asked Troy Singleton here, or if she had the guts to just bust in! You'll think about the book, captain. It's time for me to go home."

Schnucke stirred uneasily and got up, moving close to the captain's knee in a stance of quiet defiance.

"You're a nasty old witch," Maclain told his dog good humoredly. "That's Winnie, the Jordan's cocker. He's tried to make friends every time you've been here. Now be polite and lie down."

She obeyed grudgingly. Maclain snapped his fingers and patted the sofa. Winnie jumped up and settled close beside him.

Harry came by and gave the captain another cocktail.

A man came in from the terrace, stepping cautiously across the sill.

"Is that your dog?"

"Which one?" The captain smiled.

"The big one. I know Winnie. He's staring at her with a lovelorn frown."

"Yes, she's mine."

"O, you're Duncan Maclain. I should have known. I'm slightly oiled. I'm Bob Morse of the Globe-Tribune. Do you mind if I sit down?"

"Not at all."

"Umm." Maclain sipped his martini.

CONCLUSION.

Sandra's attention had strayed. A rider was coming over the hill. She watched him, in her eyes a queer look of suspended hope. The man on horseback waved a hand at her. Dr. Brown smiled again. Her young man had flung himself from the saddle and taken her in his arms.

"By golly, I was right," the doctor said aloud, and walked into the house.

Bob's first word was, "Stan?"

"Dr. Brown says he's going to be all right."

"Glory, hallelujah!" he cried. "I've been worrying all day about him."

"You didn't find Uhlmann," she said.

His voice and manner changed. "Yes, I found him."

"Did—did you leave him at the ranch?"

"No." He added gravely: "I left him at Nogales."

Back of the words she read finality. An anxious excitement set the blood pounding thru her heart. "You killed him."

"I came out of a store and he fired. He had the first three shots and missed. Several men saw it. The sheriff said I was free to go."

She held him close in her strong young arms. "I've been so frightened. I kept seeing you—trapped. And now he's gone. And Jug Packard, too. Did you know that Uhlmann killed him near here after the fight in the arroyo?"

"I heard so."

"All your enemies are gone. We can forget the long nightmare of the dreadful years that have passed. We'll be together—always."

He laughed, happily. "While the sands o' life shall run."

It was surprising what a change the laughter made in his harsh, bony face. The years and all they had done to him were lifted from it.

She said: "Gov. Andrews will pardon you. He's been waiting for a chance. We have plenty of evidence now. And you'll be a hero for ridding Arizona of that bad man."

He did not like that. The thought of public acclaim for what he had done disgusted him. Yet the papers were full of the story. Editorials demanded that he be pardoned. No act of the administration of Gov. Andrews was more generally approved than the pardoning of Robert Webb.

One unexpected result was the attitude of the Packard heirs. The family of the mine owner had been alienated from him for years. They had lived in Tucson and had seen him only at rare intervals. Even before the pardon his son had come to Bob with an offer of restitution. He suggested turning over to Webb a majority of the Johnny B stock.

Bob wanted no part of the mine. He hoped never to see it again. But since he wished to get hold of a cattle ranch, he made it clear he would accept a fair monetary compensation. Young Packard suggested he take the Sinclair ranch with all the cattle and equipment on it. This was a fine spread, recently bought by Jug for close to a hundred thousand dollars. Bob looked the place over and accepted the offer.

The young couple moved to it. On it a large family of Webbs were born and brought up. Among her noisy and turbulent brood Sandra moved happily. She ruled lightly and wisely. With the passing years she retained the loveliness that had distinguished her youth. When her husband looks at her today, gray haired, the toll the decades have taken stamped on her face, he still thinks her the paragon of women.

Lobster is the most elegant of seafoods, and you need a fat pocketbook to afford it, either in a restaurant or at home. Because it is an expensive delicacy, lobster should be carefully prepared. It's easy to toughen the delicate meat by overcooking, or by using too high a temperature in the cooking. Hard-to-chew lobster is a bitter disappointment for the cook and for the person who's going to eat it.

You won't find lobsters in profusion in many fish markets. Frequently you'll have to give your fish dealer notice a day or two ahead if you wish to get one.

Lobsters are more plentiful in summer than in winter, but if you're set on broiled lobster or lobster thermidor for some special occasion, you'll be able to find it.

If you are squeamish about buying your lobster alive, as the epicure does, ask your dealer to cook it for you. To be good, a lobster should be alive and kicking when plunged into boiling water or court bouillon for the 15 or 20 minutes required for cooking.

LOBSTER THERMIDOR.
[Serves four.]

2 2-pound lobsters, cooked
1 green onion, minced
1 tablespoon melted margarine
1 can cream of mushroom soup
Milk to dilute soup
2 tablespoons sherry
Salt, paprika
Fine bread crumbs

Split and clean the lobsters and remove meat from shells, claws, and legs. Cut lobster meat into pieces. Saute the onion in the margarine. Add enough milk to the soup to thin it slightly and beat to remove lumps. Add lobster meat to mushroom sauce and heat, but do not boil. Add sherry and fill lobster shells with the hot mixture. Sprinkle filled shells with fine crumbs saturated with margarine and brown lobster under broiler. Serve at once.

As lobster meat is rich, the accompanying foods should be simple. Fresh or frozen peas and a crisp, tossed salad make an excellent color and flavor foil for lobster. Have ice cream for dessert if you like. There never was a more ridiculous notion than that lobster and milk or ice cream shouldn't be eaten in the same meal!

A New World Now Beckons Riveter Rosie

Will Rosie the Riveter and Winnie the Welder return to their former jobs as homemakers after the war? Well, if manufacturers of household appliances have their way about it, they will, judging by the displays in the Palmer House, where the 1945 appliance show is being held.

As an inducement to make tomorrow's kitchen attractive to women, manufacturers are offering vacuum cleaners minus the nuisance of a bag to empty, a washing machine that fills itself with water, washes the clothes, damp dries them, empties and cleans itself, and shuts itself off. There is even an outdoor clothes line so constructed that a woman can stand in one place and hang out an entire washing—no props to adjust, no muddy feet, and no line to clean.

Then there is the "breakfaster," a new type of toaster-cooker that produces the toast and coffee at the same time, a portable steam heat radiator, deep freeze units, a sink that is more than merely a fixture where the water comes in and the waste goes out, and an electric iron without a cord in which to get all tangled up.

The show is dedicated to the American housewife who, in her task of rearing the American family, walks more than 3,000 miles every year in her home, washes 26,280 dishes a year, spends 9½ years of her life cooking, and cooks more than 57,000 meals.

Buyers attending the show predict tomorrow will be a wonderful day for housewives and are looking for a big boom in business.

Some dealers suggest that small businesses be given the first opportunity to make purchases since the large users had a greater stock on hand when appliances went off the market.

Looking at Hollywood

—By Hedda Hopper—

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 7.—Just to keep the record straight, a new producing company, Popular Pictures, composed of Ed Peskay and Harry Hopkins, will make "Ten Little Indians," which may go back to its original title, "And Then There Were None." Dudley Nichols' screen version will be used, and the same cast originally announced for the production—Barry Fitzgerald, Walter Huston, Roland Young, and Mischa Auer will appear in it. . . . It will read "Vincent Price and Gene Tierney in 'Dragonwyck,'" which means star billing for Price from now on. Darryl Zanuck broke the good news to Price yesterday. . . . Now that Cecil De Mille has decided not to do "The Flame," he'd like nothing better than to get the rights to "The Robe," and has even put up a bid for it. But Frank Ross isn't selling at any price. He plans to put the picture into production in June, and Mervyn Leroy will direct. . . . Charles Gordon, who was a protege of the late Richard Bennett, has done five pictures in four months for Republic, and will soon be seen on the stage here in "Decision" by Edward Chodorov, which ran for so long in New York.

Secret But Not Very.

Columbia studio, which isn't admitting that Jose Iturbi doubled for Cornell Wilde when Chopin takes to the piano in "A Song to Remember," also isn't admitting that Frank Sinatra doubles for Phil Silvers in a number for the ladies of the harem in "One Thousand and One Nights," but everybody's going to know it anyway when the swooning starts. Scene ends with all the gals out cold. . . . Arthur Lubin will have the largest indoor set ever built for a technicolor picture in "Night in Paradise." There will be two pools, one for bathing and the other where the fair hand maidens of Princess Delara! [Merle Oberon], polish the goldfish for their mistress. This all takes place in 560 B. C. so don't try it on your swimming pool or fish bowl. . . . Dee Turnell, of the Copacabana, who has been cutting quite a rug with the New York nighthounds, has been signed by Twentieth for a spot specialty dance in "The Dolly Sisters."

Hot Time in Berlin.

Gertrude Berg [Mollie Goldberg to her radio followers] has arranged to be released from her daily broadcast in March and will take Mollie overseas to entertain our boys. In a telegram from New York she says, "I am thrilled at having Mollie entertain our boys. She also hopes to watch them march victorious thru the Brandenberg gate and she wants to interview that house painter thru bars." . . . It was like old home week on the "G. I. Joe" set the other day. Bob Hope came over to visit Ernie Pyle, before Pyle left for the Pacific. Those two hadn't seen each other since they were both in Sicily about a year ago. Ernie gave Bob a picture of himself. Also there were Mrs. Tom Treanor, whose husband was a buddy of Ernie's overseas, and her three children. They were also collecting autographed pictures. . . . Hope and his wife, with the Jerry Colonnas, are now resting at Desert Inn before going east to do four broadcasts, after which they'll return to Palm Springs for broadcasts from Tourney hospital and army camps.

On Her Way to Stardom.

Virgina Welles [no relation to Orson], the Wisconsin beauty Paramount put under contract five months ago, has been lent to Columbia for one of the lead in Sol Siegel's "Kiss and Tell." George Fifield, her manager, is mighty happy about the whole thing. . . . The Andrews sisters arrived in Yuma just in time to go on the air for the Bob Hope show, but without their orchestrations. It seems Skinnay Ennis forgot to bring them, so the girls carried on with just a piano and a bit of temper. . . . Frans Werfel came down from Santa Barbara to spend the holidays with his family, but went right back. He has recently suffered another heart attack, and has suspended work on his new novel. Here's hoping for a speedy recovery. . . . Maria Korda, ex-wife of Alexander Korda, will marry Capt. Joseph Herbert Pool, representative of the British air forces commission, as soon as his divorce is final. . . . Gale Storm is back in town after visiting her husband's parents in South Bend, Ind. . . . Martha Vickers was so interested in her part of the psychopathic young dame in "The Big Sleep" that she practised some crazy expressions going home on the bus. A man near her asked whether she was all right. Martha replied, "I'm not crazy at all. I'm just practicing." The man moved to another seat.

Double Harness Wins.

It's getting to be a habit of Abbott and Costello's to land in the first ten box office favorites of the Motion Picture Herald poll. They've done it for four years. But being picked for 1944 was something special, because they did only two pictures—"In Society" and "Lost in a Harem." The latter was released too late for the 1944 poll. . . . Bill Board magazine has voted Ben Carter and Manton Moreland outstanding colored comics of 1944. First picture in which they were teamed together was "Bowery to Broadway." They've been held over on the Bob Burns show for eight weeks, and are now going into their own show, to be called Wander Inn.

Goren on Bridge

[Copyright: 1945: By Charles H. Goren.]

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ.

Q. 1—As South you hold:
♠742 ♥AK1065 ♦53 ♣652
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 diamond	1 spade	?

What do you bid?

A.—Pass. Despite your two honor tricks and five card major suit there is no action you can take with safety. A bid of two hearts forces partner to bid again and if he bids either three diamonds or two no trump, it will leave you with an uncomfortable feeling. Wait to see if he can bid again.

Q. 2—As South you hold:
♠KQ1064 ♥5 ♦J94 ♣Q1076
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 diamond	Pass
1 spade	2 hearts	2 spades	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. While the hand is not rich in honor values it has great playing strength. Thus far you have promised very little and partner has indicated a good hand by his free rebid. Your diamond holding should fit right in and anything partner has in clubs will be developed by your holding.

Q. 3—As South you hold:
♠A5 ♥Q9964 ♦74 ♣AQ62
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	1 spade	1 no trump	2 spades

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. Your hand is of minimum strength and despite the fact that partner has shown an interest in the proceedings you must not give the impression that you have a big hand by making a free rebid. Pass it to him and see what he wants to do about it.

Q. 4—As South you hold:
♠A75 ♥A63 ♦Q2 ♣A9853
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	1 spade	2 clubs	Pass
2 diamonds	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. This bid serves a dual purpose. In the first place it is forcing to game, which you surely wish to reach. Secondly if partner happens to have something to spare even a slam might be mildly considered. In any event it permits partner to bid the no trump, which might play better from his side, especially if he happens to have the queen of spades.

Q. 5—As South you hold:
♠J10765 ♥52 ♦6 ♣97532
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 heart	Double
2 diamonds	Pass	Pass	3 spades
3 hearts	3 spades	Pass	Pass
4 hearts	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four spades. In view of the fact that you made one free bid on this hand, partner may be relying on you to take a trick. Far from being able to do so yourself, you actually destroy the trick taking power of his hand by your length in the suits in which he obviously has his high cards. You should bid four spades in self defense, and don't be surprised if you make it.

Q. 6—As South you hold:
♠AK ♥QJ1075 ♦KQ72 ♣K5
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 spade	Double
2 spades	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	2 no trump	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three hearts. Partner has twice passed so cannot have very much and it is clear that he must have an evenly balanced hand, therefore he is almost certain to have three hearts. All he needs is an ace to give you a splendid play for game in the major.

Q. 7—As South you hold:
♠Q6 ♥KJ765 ♦AKQ9 ♣Q7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 heart	3 spades	?

What do you bid?

A.—Five hearts. What else can you do in view of East's rudeness? Any sound opening should make an eleven trick contract safe and if partner has a sound bid with no more than one losing spade he may be able to bid the slam.

Q. 8—As South you hold:
♠A5 ♥K4 ♦AKJ964 ♣Q65
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	2 no trump	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Six no trump. You have 1½ honor tricks in excess of your opening plus an extra diamond. You say what about seven? In order for that to be a sound contract, partner in addition to the queen of diamonds would need enough honor strength for a three no trump takeout. Figure it out.

Boy Must Be Conscious of Father's Love

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"My son," writes a grandmother, "has children of his own now—a boy of 6 and a girl of 2—and it breaks my heart to witness his mismanagement, injustice, and even unkindness to his little son. The girl is the apple of her father's eye. She is a darling, I'll admit, but the boy is just as fine a little chap. . . ."

I know many men who think that in order to make a man of a boy he must be raised with strictness. They think he should not be shown affection nor leniency of any kind. Their idea is in substance to "treat 'em rough." A daughter they handle in an entirely different way—a little girl baby from the beginning is indulged by such a father, petted, caressed, and frequently spoiled to a degree.

Never was there a more mistaken idea. "Treat 'em rough" and "make 'em tough" may sound very virile and masculine, but it just doesn't work out that way. And many a boy has been made sensitive, unhappy, and resentful, and many an adult actually driven from home as the result of such treatment.

It doesn't make a boy soft or a sissy to give him understanding and to let him know that you both enjoy him and love him. There is an inherent masculinity in a boy which will manifest itself, even under a too tender treatment, not that I advocate it. But many a boy has by force of circumstances been brought up by his mother or several feminine relatives and become the manliest of men.

Another point is this: That while a father may believe in "treat 'em rough and make 'em tough," he also is greatly affronted if his boy is not polite and chivalrous as he grows older. Well, you can't have it coming and going.

Altho this may not sound like an emotional article to you, it is a fervent plea on my part to those fathers who believe in strictness and even coldness toward their boys, and warmth and overindulgence toward their girls, to change their angle and their actions, too. In ending this, let me just mention to them the fact that I have had a number of youths and grown up men tell me they never knew until they became men that their fathers lbved them at all. Don't let this state of affairs exist in your home.

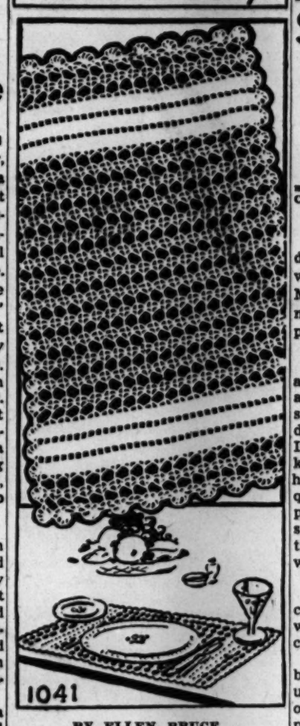
Luncheon Doily



BY ELLEN BRUCE.

A crocheted luncheon doily created in a lacet stitch is easy to make and provides a decorative table piece. A dainty shell stitch scallop edges the entire doily. Ivory mercerized crochet cotton is a suggested medium.

For instruction in crocheting the lacet stitch doily, No. 1041, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth av., New York 1, N. Y.

Thru the Looking Glass

It's no fun to be overweight, to realize when you catch an unexpected glimpse in a full length mirror that your skirt is too tight across the spreading hips to hang well, and that you have a front bulge where you should be flat. It's worse to be disproportionate than it is to be generally overweight.

But it's folly to go about getting rid of the unwanted inches the wrong way. Freak diets constitute the wrong way.

Since the holidays we've met any number of women who have started the New Year by sticking to self-imposed and really fantastic diets. They ate too much and maybe drank too much during the big week and now they're mad about a diet. The trouble is that the diet is one they heard about from a friend of a friend. A piece of toast and a glass of hot water loaded with lemon juice for breakfast, perhaps, or a three meal a day job of all meat, or one that eliminates breakfast and lunch entirely but allows the dieter to eat all she pleases at night.

These are all pretty cock-eyed ways to lose weight, and very sure ways to injure health. Food balance must be maintained. Cut down on portions, particularly the portions of fats and starches, but do keep the healthy balance of fruits, vegetables, eggs, and meats and do eat three meals a day. There is a rhythm to digestion that should be maintained — and there are food requisites that must be supplied every day.

Exercise is better than almost anything for spot reducing. Foolish dieting won't accomplish it; instead it will leave face and neck haggard and your energy way below par. It can even do lasting damage to your whole system.

Reduce if you should, but leave the self-prescribed drugs and the self-prescribed fad diets alone. Exercise and moderate eating are still the best methods, in spite of what you may hear about sensational and satisfactory results of some other routine.

Sally Requests Playthings for Five Children

[Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

We hope that mothers whose children have an overabundance of toys will be interested in the appeal of Mrs. W., who lives on the near north side. She writes about her problem as follows:

"Dear Miss Brown:

"I wonder if you could help me again. I am suffering from a heart ailment, and my doctor has prescribed a rest treatment. It will be difficult to follow his advice unless I am able to obtain playthings to keep my five children busy and happy during my periods of required quiet. Toys and books will be appreciated, and, as the youngsters still play on the floor much of the time, a rug will be needed for warmth."

A request for discarded Christmas cards has come to us from Mrs. N., who resides in a suburb west of the city.

For years her mother made scrap books for sick children and distributed them to hospitals thru a local organization. She looked to this department for help in obtaining the quantities of cards necessary for this purpose, Mrs. N. is now carrying on the task which gave so much pleasure to her mother and to the recipients of her handiwork. She appeals to our readers to replenish her rapidly diminishing supply of old cards, and offers to reimburse them for postage on packages sent to her.

Ward [Piggy] Lambert, veteran coach, has another Purdue university quintet in a contending spot in the Western conference race and pre-season prognosticators who were not giving the Boilermakers much consideration are busily engaged in reshuffling their predictions following week-end events.

Ward Lambert.

These happenings saw the defending Ohio State champions beaten and Illinois, which had been more or less holding a major share of the spotlight as the result of its series with Great Lakes and De Paul, suffering defeat.

Purdue Takes to Road.

Purdue, which had lost to De Pauw and Notre Dame earlier in the season, finally began to show signs of revival by whipping the Illini in a return engagement last week. To prove that the triumph over Notre Dame was not of the fluke variety Lambert's charges dealt a 37 to 36 reverse to Ohio State Saturday night.

Just how strong the Boilermakers are and how much they will figure in championship consideration will be determined this week. Purdue will place its new found power on the testing block tonight against Minnesota in Minneapolis, and Saturday night all debates will be settled after the Boilermakers' game with the Hawkeyes in Iowa City.

Iowa and Northwestern, counted among the teams with title chances, succeeded in winning their conference openers, the Hawkeyes whipping Minnesota, 41 to 34, and the Wildcats dealing Wisconsin a 52 to 37 reversal. Michigan's youthful quintet, whipped by Ohio State a week ago, turned in a pair of triumphs last week to stay around the top of the Big Nine heap. The Wolverines' outstanding victory was the 43 to 38 affair with Illinois.

One Point Decides 'em.

Early Big Nine games featuring one point margins of victory show that conference contests are following a familiar pattern. Altho the schedule pits contenders against each other there is some indication the quintets will be battling right down to the wire as they did a year ago when Northwestern defeated Iowa in the season final. This gave Ohio State a clear claim to the title while the Hawkeyes and the Badgers finished in a tie for second one game behind.

Whether Purdue succeeds in staying in the race, Coach Lambert has a basketball organization which threatens to blast any team with championship aspirations. Guard Charley Haag was the main cog in the tight Boilermaker defense last Saturday night and Myrwin [Red] Anderson supplied the goal in the last two minutes of play that upset Ohio State. Anderson accounted for 14 points.

Gosewehr Aids Offense.

Notre Dame fans will testify that in Billy Gosewehr, former Frankfort, Ind., high school star, Lambert has a player who knows the general location of the basket. They saw Gosewehr set a new scoring record in the Notre Dame fieldhouse when he connected for nine field goals and 10 free throws for 28 points.

All Big Nine schools with the exception of Indiana will see action this week. After Purdue's meeting with Minnesota tonight there will be a schedule lapse until Friday when Northwestern plays host to Minnesota. On Saturday night Illinois will be at Michigan, Purdue at Iowa, Minnesota at Wisconsin, and Northwestern at Ohio State.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

[While Arch Ward, sports editor and conductor of the Wake, is on his vacation, this column will be prepared by members of the sports staff.]

JAMES T. GALLAGHER, vice president and general manager of the Cubs, is not perturbed by the possible change in draft requirements for athletes. . . . Jim estimates that the Cubs have available at least 30 players who are 17 years old or younger. . . . Many Blackhawk fans have protested the trade of the veteran Earl Seibert for three Detroit Red Wings, but the following note from Radio Tech. 3d Class Richard A. Kahn of Navy pier expresses a different viewpoint: "I've been following hockey, and especially the home town Red Wings, for a long time. . . . Maybe you can tell me what the Wings were thinking of when they traded a pair of stars like Cully Simon and Don Grosso for a washed up has-been like Earl Seibert. . . . To watch that guy skate this season makes you doubt that he'll be able to make it the length of the rink on his two feet. . . . Just what did the Wings gain? A few more deals like that and the Hawks' cup worries will be over, to say nothing of their fears of remaining in the cellar." . . . Kahn would like an answer. . . . Maybe the Red Wing officials can supply it. . . . Lt. [j. g.] Marion Asa, Bradley Tech guard, who was a member of the 1941 Tribune College Football All-Star squad, was an officer aboard a submarine which has been presumed lost in the Pacific area. . . . Dick Wakefield, late of the Detroit Tigers and before that a cadet at Iowa Pre-Flight, has completed his recruit training at Great Lakes and is scheduled to be detached for sea duty at an early date.

Bill White, Los Angeles promoter, was preparing to put on midget auto races in the city's big Coliseum when the government issued an edict against it. . . . Warren Seebert, news broadcaster at the Fleet City [Cal.] navy base, once was a batting practice pitcher for the Cubs and was under contract to the Moline club of the Three-Eye league when he entered the service. . . . Eddie Carfagnini of Chicago, who won some notice as an amateur bicycle racer in 1939, has been killed in action in Europe. . . . Reggie McNamara, the old iron man of the bike circuit, is employed at a shipyard in Kearny, N. J. . . . The U. S. O. baseball unit which included Umpire Beans Reardon, Steve O'Neill, Johnny Lindell, Tuck Stainback, and Franklin Lewis, Cleveland sports writer, is due back in the United States within a few days, having covered thousands of miles in the Pacific theater of war. . . . Fred Cady, Southern California swimming coach, calls Neil Kohlhase of the Trojans the greatest water polo player in the school's history. . . . Neil has scored 26 goals in five games.

Life Is Like That.

Did you ever start looking high and low
Where e'r you might chance to be,
For something you'd only that moment dropped,
But come what may, you can't see
Where that pencil has rolled or that quarter has bounced,
It's completely out of sight,
But suddenly your impatience is cooled
By an unexpected delight.

For altho' you don't find the thing you've just dropped
You all at once feel a glow
For there in a corner lurks something
That you lost long, long ago;
No, you never seem to locate the thing
You've dropped just a moment before,
But out of the blue there oft comes to you
Something missing of yore.

Life, I think, is a lot like that,
We mourn at each new sent cross,
But while we are grieving some olden joy
Oft turns up to cancel our loss.

Two defending title holders were dethroned yesterday afternoon as new champions were crowned in all 10 divisions of the Illinois speed skating contest at Glenn Ellyn. Approximately 400 skaters competed in the event and team honors went to the Glen Ellyn A. A., with 380 points while the C. Y. O. and Peirce playground, tied for second place with 240 points apiece.

Lowell Miller, defending senior champion, representing the C. Y. O., surrendered his title to Ray Blum of the United States navy, who won two of the three events for the division, the two mile and the three-quarter mile. Miller placed third in the two mile and 440 yard events.

Mrs. Gordon Wins Mile Race.

Mrs. Elaine Bogda Gordon, who held the women's senior title, won the mile race, but Peggy Barber of the Barrett club captured the 440 yard race and placed second in the mile to take the title.

John Klemundt of the C. Y. O., the favorite, won the intermediate boys' title held by George Fischer of the Northwest S. C., now in the army. Klemundt won both events for this group.

Fred Gross of Peirce won both final events for junior boys, to take the title held last year by Ken Henry of the Barrett club.

Glen Ellyn Captures Relay.

The club relay, a two-thirds mile event, was won by Glen Ellyn, with C. Y. O., second, and Northwest S. C., third.

The class B men's one mile final, was won by Dick Campbell of Northwest S. C. John Mitchell and William Gauger, both of Glen Ellyn, placed second and third, respectively.

Joseph Prather of Champaign-Urbana captured the juvenile boys' crown by winning both the half mile and one-sixth mile events, and R. Gross of Peirce playground took honors in the midget boys' division by winning both finals for that group.

Three Tie for Juvenile Event.

Tho she failed to win either of the two events, Virginia Mezzetta of the C. Y. O. placed second in each to win the intermediate girls' title. Virginia Bell of Barrett won the other race for this division.

The junior girls' championship was won by Barbara Meyer of Glen Ellyn who placed first in both events. Three girls tied for the juvenile title. They are Joan Holm of Peirce, Patricia Nikoert of Peirce and Mary Beckley of Glen Ellyn. Joan and Mary each won an event and Patricia took second in one and third in the other.

Midget girls' honors went to Donna Long of Glen Ellyn, who won both the 220 and 440 yard races.

Northwest S. C., Champaign-Urbana, Barrett, the United States navy and Swift trailed the first three teams, in that order, in club points.

BARRETT ENROLLS 43

Barrett playground, 2022 Cermak rd., will be represented by 43 boys and girls in the 28th Silver Skates Derbies which will be held Jan. 20 and 21 in Garfield park. All of these contestants are 17 or under, and the youngest of the boys is Frank Wilk, 9, who will compete in the boys' Midget Derby for skaters under 12. If the entire group reports for preliminary races, Barrett will have a chance to win the trophy annually presented to the squad with the largest number in the preliminaries.

There are two girls, Frances Ann Maxwell and Roberta Vogrich, who also are 9. While they must compete in the girls' Junior Derby, and probably cannot win one of the six awards offered in the championship because of age handicap, they will receive souvenir medals, as will all contestants in THE TRIBUNE'S Derbies.

Fog Rolls In from Pacific; Stops Los Angeles Golf Open

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 7 (AP).—Fog blitzed the tail end of the third round of the 72 hole Los Angeles Open golf tournament today, leaving some of the contestants stranded with visibility almost at zero.

The extraordinary climax to the next to the last 18 holes of the 19th annual links event here halted play just as some of the potential leaders were finishing the last holes.

Among them were Sam Byrd, Detroit; Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles; Leland Gibson, Randolph Field, Tex.; John Revolta, Evanston, Ill.; Harold [Jug] McSpaden, Sanford, Me., and George Schneiter, Salt Lake City.

They'll Finish Up Today.

All had a chance to sweep into the third round lead. The fog rolled in so thickly the remaining contestants on the Riviera course could hardly see 30 yards ahead of them. Tournament officials permitted them to halt play, with instructions to take up tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock where they left off today.

Meanwhile, Byron Nelson, Toledo, O., and Sgt. E. J. Harrison, Wright field, Dayton, O., shared the temporary lead for the third round. They finished earlier in the day, Sgt. Harrison shooting a two under par 36—33—69 for a total of 213. Nelson reported later with a 35—35—70 to tie the count.

As the chilling fog poured in from the ocean, it obscured the course from the clubhouse vantage point. Hundreds of spectators scattered for their homes. The weather had been sunny for most of the day.

While Nelson, one of the favorites, and Sgt. Harrison, winner of the recent Miami Open, enjoyed a first place deadlock they did not have the position clinched.

Byrd, who teed off from the 140 bracket today, was one under par when he drove down the 18th fairway. He needed only par for the last hole, to post a 70 and a total 212 for the lead. The 18th, 455 yards long, is a fairly easy birdie hole.

Playing with Byrd were Mangrum, who shared the halfway lead with McSpaden at 140, and Gibson, who opened the third round with 142. Mangrum, one over par when he picked up, still had a chance for a 213 and Gibson was two over standard figures.

They Need a Compass!

McSpaden, Revolta, and Schneiter were left groping on the 15th fairway. McSpaden was three over par when he gave up but needed only pars for the last four holes for a 213. At the same point Revolta was one over and needed pars for 213. Schneiter, three over, needed par for 215.

The round produced some outstanding golf by those who finished. Sgt. Harrison's 69 was equaled by Herman Barron, White Plains, N. Y., altho he was farther back with a 220 for the 54 holes.

The 71 shooters included Sgt. Jim Ferrier, Camp Roberts, Cal.; Ed Dudley, Atlantic City; Amateur Ed Furgol, Detroit; Oliver Sleppy, Los Angeles; Olin Dutra, Los Angeles, and Willie Goggin, White Plains, N. Y. Only Sgt. Ferrier, with 216, was near the pace, however.

Mrs. George [Babe Didrickson] Zaharias, Santa Monica, only woman entrant, posted a 79 for 236.

Sunday Betting Proves a Flop to Dick Tracys

Any policeman able to find evidence yesterday of handbooks taking bets on the horse races in Mexico would deserve high rating as a detective, according to numerous persons asked where any such betting could be found. It was the first Sunday since the federal government, thru James Byrnes, war mobilization director, put an end to racing in this country. Sunday is Mexico's best racing day.

During the week many of the turf publications suspended but the green sheet and the Racing Form continued to furnish racing news, a la Mexican racing. It was explained by old time gamblers that the professionals didn't want the bettors to get out of the habit and hoped to encourage them to wager on the contests south of the border.

After a few days' experience, however, the word among the bookies was that few people would bet any real money on the Mexican horses. The government, too, undertook to make it unpopular, to say the least, to clutter up the telephone and telegraph wires with alleged racing news, so the local bookmakers were reported to be discouraged.

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Chicago's Blackhawks and New York's Rangers played a scorless tie in the National Hockey league tonight before a Madison Square Garden crowd of 11,843. Tonight marked the third league shutout of the current hockey season with the Hawks having been involved in two of them.

Toronto's Finn McCool scored both previous shutouts this season, holding Montreal and the Blackhawks scoreless.

The game tonight, devoid of any real scoring threats, was highlighted by several heated flareups. The first took place in the opening period when Hank Goldup of the Rangers took exception to tactics used by Pete Horeck on Walt Atanas and had to be forcibly restrained by Referee King Clancy. Horeck was the only player penalized.

The second and more serious brawl took place in the second period and all players on the ice became more or less involved. It started when Joe Cooper checked the Rangers' Bill Moe into the boards and Atanas drew a two minute penalty for highsticking and Cooper a similar banishment for cross checking.

The tie was the fourth between the two teams, with each six owning a victory in six games.

WINGS WIN; TIE FOR LEAD

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 7 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings scored three goals in 46 seconds in a last period spree tonight to whip the Boston Bruins, 8 to 4, before 12,483 fans. The Wings thus moved into a deadlock with Montreal for the National Hockey league leadership.

CALL TO ACTION COMES ON MORE THAN 20 FRONTS

Chicago Boxers—Enter Now!

BY WILFRID SMITH.

While Chicago is marshaling its Golden Gloves army to compete in two sectional tournaments leading to the city championships Feb. 12, more than a score of out of town centers have completed plans for their tournaments. These winners and Chicago's title holders will meet in the Tournament of Champions in the Chicago Stadium Feb. 26, 27, and 28.

Chicago and the metropolitan area are immediately concerned with the 18th annual sectional tournaments. These will be held Jan. 29 and 30 in the St. Sabina gymnasium and in Loyola university's alumni gymnasium Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 and 2. Entries now are being received for competition in novice and open divisions.

The 16 south side champions—open and novice winners in eight weight classes—will meet the 16 north side champions in Marigold Gardens Feb. 12. That night Chicago's 16 city champions will receive golden gloves and the open division winners will be determined to represent this city against the champions from the west, Pacific coast, south, and northwest in the Stadium bouts.

16 Year Age Limit.

All amateur boxers are eligible for the 18th tournament in Chicago but no boy can compete under the rules of the central association of the A. A. U. if he is under 16. Each contestant must file his name and address or have this done by his coach. He then will receive a letter of instructions and will report at the C. Y. O. gymnasium, 31 E. Congress st., for preliminary physical examination.

It is important that entry be made immediately so that preliminary examination dates may be set as soon as possible. There probably will be three nights assigned and on one of them the boxers of the C. Y. O. will report. The C. Y. O. lost the Chicago team championship last year for the first time in recent campaigns to the members of the Savoy Athletic club.

No boy under 21 may compete without parental consent and a card will be mailed to each applicant which must be signed by parent or guardian and presented to the clerks at the time of his preliminary examination.

Memphis Leads Parade.

Seven of the out of town centers will start activity this month. The first of these will be conducted by the Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal starting Wednesday. Memphis will have five nights of preliminaries and will hold its finals Feb. 7, 8, and 9. New Orleans, La., Item; Indianapolis, Ind., Times; Milwaukee, Wis., Journal; Muncie, Ind., Star; Evansville, Ind., Courier, and Nashville, Tenn., Tennessean are the other centers starting their Golden Gloves competition this month. In all, however, finals are scheduled next month.

Nashville's tournament, which annually draws entries from central and eastern Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, and Kentucky, will hold its championship rounds Feb. 12 and 13. Milwaukee's Wisconsin state tournament opens Jan. 26 and its fourth and championship night will be Feb. 9.

The Texas state tournament, which brings together sectional winners in Fort Worth under the auspices of the Star-Telegram, now is in progress. These teams meet in Fort Worth Feb. 14-19.

PRO FOOTBALL MAY LEGISLATE ON ELBOW PUNCH

Rules Committee Goes Into Action Tomorrow.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

The professional football zealots, who never let cobwebs gather on their rule book, will go into session tomorrow at the Blackstone as a prelude to the winter meeting of the National Football league, which opens Wednesday.

The rules committee, which numbers five active members, plus Elmer Layden, the league president, and Hugh [Shorty] Ray, technical adviser, have at least 21 changes to discuss. This was the total a couple of days ago and doubtless they've thought of some more since then.

Most significant of the lot could be the elimination of slugging in the guise of the elbow block. During the last season, players were getting punched silly every Sunday afternoon with brawny forearms or elbows and these pro football players have this trick down to a science, on the giving end, of course.

Scan Revolutionary Changes.

Steve Owen, the New York Giants' coach, and a member of the rules committee, will suggest that it be illegal for the elbow block to connect above an opponent's shoulder. This is not a move designed against the T formation linemen, as has been reported. The Bears are artists of the elbow block, but linemen in other formations use it just as effectively.

It would seem that some of the suggested changes are too revolutionary, such as elimination of the kick for point after touchdown and invoking a sudden death extra period for games which end in a tie. The point after touchdown has become almost automatic among professional elevens. Don Hutson had more than 60 in a row until he was stopped early in the season. The Bears had a sure-fire point specialist in Pete Gudauskas.

Only 3 Games End in Tie.

There were only three deadlocked games in the league last year. One of these was in Wrigley field involving the Bears and Detroit Lions. This was the game which Bear coaches conceded virtually knocked their team out of the race. Had the Bears beaten the Lions later in the year on the same afternoon the Packers were being defeated by the Giants they would have failed to catch Green Bay by the margin of this tied game.

Owen, in conversational huddles, had suggested that ties be counted as a half game lost, which seems sensible. As the rules now stand a team could win one game, tie all the rest and maintain a 1.000 rating. On this basis it would finish ahead of a team which lost only one game and won all the others. This proposal may be officially aired.

Elimination of the point after touchdown will create more ties than formerly and also add to the importance of field goal kicking. Last season the Bears did not try to score by this method because they never found themselves in a situation which called for a field goal.

BIG 10 ATHLETIC DIRECTORS HOLD SECRET CONFAB

The Western conference athletic directors, after a secret meeting yesterday in the Sherman hotel, doubtless approached closer to the problem of selecting a successor to the late Maj. John L. Griffith, the organization's commissioner since 1922, but what transpired was withheld.

At the same time, the directors from each of the 10 schools were confronted with a problem which is not exactly a stranger to these hectic times—finding new offices. The Big Ten has maintained headquarters in the Sherman for 15 years. Its lease has expired and the group has hopes of finding quarters elsewhere in the loop.

Kenneth L. [Tug] Wilson, Northwestern's athletic director, admitted the meeting was held, but said no statement could be made at this time. Wilson is a member of a three-man group which is administering the conference business until a commissioner is named. The other members are H. O. [Fritz] Crisler of Michigan and L. W. St. John of Ohio State.

Wilson said there was no chance of an official meeting being held this week in Columbus where the N. C. A. A. will go into its winter session. He said that two or three of the conference athletic directors would be unable to be in Columbus.

The Northwestern director added that no date has been set for the next meeting. When Maj. Griffith's successor finally is selected, he must be approved by the faculty committee. Wilson has been mentioned as a probable selection. He said that other matters, in addition to the commissionership and the search for new quarters, were discussed.

The team scoring the most points in all races will receive the Walter Eckersall Memorial trophy.

Four Derby classes will report Jan. 20 for qualifying races in Garfield park. Other classes report Jan. 21, and will continue with the qualifiers of the previous day to the championships. Here is the racing schedule:

Coach's Wife Keeps Tally for St. George

BY DAVID CONDON.

This is the story of how St. George's senior basketball team defeated Loyola, 36 to 24, yesterday afternoon in Evanston, as told by Kay Burnell.

Now one is usually skeptical about hearing the results of a sporting event from a good looking girl, particularly since most good looking girls go to basketball games because it is the proper thing to do—like collecting Sinatra records and wearing charm bracelets.

But in the case of Kay Burnell, it is different. Kay is the wife of Max Burnell, coach of the St. George Dragons, a former Notre Dame football player, and occasionally a member of the Chicago Bears. So any one can see that when one talks to Kay Burnell, it is strictly basketball.

Kay Works and Chats.

Kay is the St. George scorer, and yesterday she was on hand early to keep an account of the game with Loyola. The first game, between the juniors, was close, and when Kay had added up the foul shots, free throws missed, and field goals, it developed that the Dragon juniors had lost, 21 to 20.

Kay scribbled down the lineups for the main game, and then, in the idle moments, began recounting her own story.

"I suppose it looks strange for a woman to keep score. I never saw a basketball game, not even in school, until I married Max. Then, one day, we went on a road trip, and the St. George team had no scorer. When it was over, Max thought the Dragons should have had more points than were credited in the scorebook, and since it was a close game and St. George's lost, we thought we were robbed.

"When we came home, Max got out a scorebook and we stayed up until 2 o'clock in the morning as Max taught me how to keep score. Since then I've kept tally for all the games."

This One Is Easy.

At this point, the main game started, and Kay began marking down the scoring and attempted scoring. By the end of the first quarter, St. George was leading, 11 to 3, and Kay said:

"I'm glad it's this way. When the game is real close and the score changes hands, I get too excited and jump up and down when I should be watching the scorebook."

By this time, husband Max started substituting the balance of his squad, and a large number had seen action by the time the half ended, with St. George leading, 14 to 10.

"You watch this center, Charles Castino," said Kay, during the intermission, "he's a pretty good player. One of the best on the team."

Castino was watched for the balance of the game, altho two other centers followed him in the St. George lineup. He won scoring honors with nine points as St. George used 15 players in winning, 36 to 24.

"It's lots of fun," said Kay, snapping shut the scorebook. "I've seen several good games, altho sometimes the roast burned while we were away. But Max is certain that the score is kept correctly—and we can always scramble a plate of eggs when we get home."

The Bee Vacs rolled on yesterday's early squad, but their efforts withstood all challengers thru last night's final shift. The Husting Printing of Milwaukee and the Meister Braus of the Classic league, the Chicago city champions, gave the Bee Vacs some anxious moments, the former ending in second place with 4,008 total, a single pin ahead of the Meisters. BROWN, ROSE TO BOX TONIGHT IN MARIGOLD BOUT

Collins Brown, 1944 Chicagoland Golden Gloves middleweight champion, is expected to receive the hardest test of his brief professional career when he meets Corp. Buddy Rose of Fort Thomas, Ky., in an eight round bout tonight in Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace.

Brown will enter the ring with an undefeated record of eight victories and one draw since turning pro last May. Collins scored five straight victories before being held to that draw verdict. In his last appearance he scored a fifth round knockout over Lou Angelucci of South Chicago in Chicago Stadium on Nov. 24.

In two previous starts in this city, Corp. Rose knocked out James [Smyles] Wilson in the first round and Paul Frazier in the fifth.

Alvin Gomez and Dan Robinson, Chicago junior welterweight, are paired in an eight round secondary feature. A five round event will bring together Jerry Pittro and Kid Raymond, welterweights. Ray Glenn, Indianapolis lightweight, is matched with Nick Stenson, Cincinnati, and James Kiggins, 155 pounder, also of Indianapolis, with James Wilson in four round encounters.

TWO ICE SKATING RECORDS BROKEN AT MINNEAPOLIS

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 7 (AP).—Two national speed skating records were broken here in the Franklin Co-op meet. Bobby Fitzgerald negotiated the senior men's 880 yards in 1 minute 14 and two-tenths seconds to knock a full second off the mark set by Clas Thunberg of Finland at Lake Placid, N. Y., in 1926. Betty Fahlin clipped three-tenths of a second off the intermediate girls' 440 record with a 41.7 seconds performance. Betty Knapp of St. Paul set the old mark in 1940.

JURY TO PROBE U.S. BRANCH OF BEARING TRUST

Files of SKF Industries to Be Examined.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 7 [Special].—Books and records of SKF Industries, American subsidiary of SKF, Sweden, the ball bearing trust which has been supplying war material to Germany, will be examined by a federal grand jury here, it was disclosed today.

Don C. Miller, United States district attorney for northern Ohio, said his office is aiding in preparing subpenas for a grand jury inquiry which will be undertaken by representatives of the anti-trust division of the attorney general's office, headed by Wendell Berge.

Expected Many Months.

Miller refused to amplify his statement, asserting matters under investigation by a grand jury are secret. In Washington Berge described the inquiry as a "Cleveland field operation" and said he could not predict what might happen next.

Government action in regard to the American subsidiary of the Swedish trust which has had an important role in keeping Germany's war factories in operation has been expected for many months. In government circles, however, the situation has been regarded as delicate because William L. Batt, president of SKF Industries, is vice chairman of the war production board.

U. S. Pact Rumored.

Rumors were current in Washington last spring that the American government had entered into an agreement allocating SKF bearings made in Sweden to Germany. Former Sen. Nye [R., N. D.] in a statement last May cited the Swedish legation as authority for such a statement and appealed to the Truman committee to air the affair.

Nye said at that time that "something very peculiar" is going on with regard to SKF, "and this very peculiar something has its roots in the United States and flowers in Hitler's Germany." Nye recalled that during the World war corporations with international connections were "blithely doing business as usual — with the enemy" while Americans were dying in the trenches.

THE QUESTION.

How do you get most of your bruises?

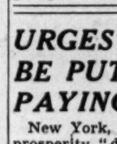
WHERE ASKED.

The Bateman school, 1000 Lake Shore dr.

THE ANSWERS.

Lewis Collens, 6, 4157 Clarendon av.—We don't play real hockey—just use old clubs and a rock. We don't wear skates, but we play hockey on the ice. I get hit in the shins with clubs, and bruised from falling on my elbows and shoulders. Sometimes we kick each other in the shins. We don't do it on purpose, but it's a pretty rough game.

Mary Jean Hough, 7, 2942 Belle Plaine av.—I turn the light off before I go to bed and then in the dark I can't tell where I am going. I put my hands out in front of me and try to feel where I'm walking so I won't run into anything. But many times I've stubbed my toe or bumped my knee on my mother's bed.



Richard Farber, 5, 3529½ Broadway.—My big tricycle causes me a lot of trouble. I go riding with my friends, the kids in the back yard. I haven't had it very long and can't ride well. I tip over every time I run off the sidewalk and into the rut. I got some gravel in my knee one time when I fell off.

Nancy Havermann, 8, 218 N. Central av.—When I go out to the country and play with my cousins I'm out doors more than I am at home. I get pushed and tripped. In the summer time I go roller skating on the sidewalk. When I fall down then I get skinned up good because I go fast and the sidewalk is awfully hard.

Richard Ripley, 7, 403 Blackhawk st.—I have two turtles and keep them in a bowl on my dresser. I often run into the dresser at night in the dark. Once I bumped it so hard I knocked the turtle bowl to the floor. I didn't mind getting bruised as much as spilling the turtles, because they scratched around for an hour before sleeping.

Kathyrne Spitzer, 7, 201 E. Ontario st. Most of my bruises are on my knees and legs. I get them running thru the house and stumbling over the thick rugs. When the telephone rings I like to walk ahead of mother and beat her to the telephone. It's just when I get in a hurry that I fall down. If I look where I'm going I don't get hurt.

URGES GERMANY BE PUT TO WORK PAYING FOR WAR

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—European prosperity "demands that the German people be kept hard at work for the next 50 years under strict supervision," Eugene P. Thomas, president of the National Foreign Trade council, said today in a message to members.

"The economic realities of world reconstruction caution us against highly impractical proposals relating to Germany's industrial future," he said. "Germany must be made to contribute to the rehabilitation of the countries she has ruined. Reparations must be made in goods of all kinds.

"This will depend upon the extent to which the allies will permit Germans to rebuild their industrial machine. It will be found to be the better part of wisdom not to destroy Germany's capacity for making long-term contributions to world economic recovery."

DEPOSIT INSURANCE RATE.

Sen. Taft (R., O.) has proposed to reduce the premium paid by building and loan associations for deposit insurance from of 1 per cent to 1/12 of 1 per cent, the same as is paid by banks.

NEWS OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE

ARMOUR EARNS LESS, THO SALES SET NEW PEAK

Volume May Shrink with Meat Supply.

Sales of Armour & Co., second largest meat packing company, rose to $1,477,970,945 in the fiscal year ended Oct. 28, 1944, from $1,416,558,800 in the preceding year to set an all time record, George A. Eastwood, president, reported yesterday to stockholders. A record also was established in tonnage as the company helped fill the huge military, lend-lease, and civilian meat demand.

George A. Eastwood.

Profit decreased to $11,250,348 from $11,445,499 in the preceding year after dividends on Armour of Delaware preferred which has been retired. After provision for normal preferred dividends, which are in arrears, the profit was equal to $1.92 a share on common stock compared with $1.97. Arrears on the $6 cumulative convertible prior preferred amount to $28.50 a share, a total of $15,190,386, and on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred to $47.25 a share, or $1,593,034.

Earns 1/9 Cent Per Pound.

Indicating the slim margin on which the packing industry operates, Armour profit was equivalent to only ¾ cent on each dollar of sales or 1/9 cent on each pound of product. In 1943 profit was equal to 1 cent for each dollar of sales and 1/6 cent per pound.

Eastwood said the problem of allocating meat products in a period of short supply this year probably would be even greater than last year. He said careful estimates were that the total meat supply would be about 2 billion pounds less than in 1944, which in turn may reduce the company's volume.

Further, the government may take more of available supply than in 1944, leaving less for civilians.

Research Is Emphasized.

Eastwood said this outlook increased the importance of company efforts to expand its activities thru research which will permit greater utilization of products obtained from live stock. Armour developments in the field of fatty acids promise profitable and expanding activity in relation to tho separate from the meat business, he said.

"We are counting on our research activities also to open up other new and profitable operations," he said, "and our post-war planning is inseparably linked with development of new products, better utilization of by-products thru research, and finally thru expansion of manufacturing activities."

Eastwood said the company finished the year in strong financial position, with $136,058,452 of working capital — an increase of $6,526,614.

Trim Debt, Boost Capital.

He said further progress was made in strengthening the financial structure thru retirement of debt. At the end of the year the company had a funded debt of $105,280,000—a net reduction of $12,582,200 in four years. Working capital meanwhile was increased by $35,368,326.

Eastwood said the company was in a favorable inventory position in line with its policy of holding inventories as low as consistent with maintenance of its big volume of business.

Profits from foreign operations declined because of a drop in earnings in Argentina as a result of price control measures and in Uruguay and Brazil from drouths.

FERRO ENAMEL.

Ferro Enamel corporation is said to have good post-war sales prospects. What is its earning record? —P. I.

The company is a leading producer of vitreous porcelain enamel [frit] for use on iron and steel. In normal times this material is sold largely to manufacturers of household equipment. Enameled steel is used in the production of bath tubs, sinks, washing machines, refrigerators, and stoves. Frit is also employed to enamel steel for store fronts, signs, and other articles.

Partly because manufacture of many of these products has been restricted or curtailed since 1942, a large demand is believed to have accumulated. If it materializes, it is expected to mean a corresponding demand for enameling material.

Ferro Enamel also makes glazes for porcelain and table ware, color oxides, paints, synthetic finishes, complete enameling equipment, and other products. In the last two years, its facilities have been devoted largely to war work.

In the first nine months of 1944 the profit was equal to $1.30 a share, on the 233,056 shares of $1 par. By years the share earnings have been: 1943, $1.97; 1942, 78 cents; 1941, $2.14; 1940, $1.89; 1939, $1.96; 1938, 47 cents; 1937, $2.42. The earnings prior to 1940 are adjusted for a 20 per cent stock dividend paid in that year. Dividends in 1944 totaled $1 a share; in 1943, 50 cents.

France's Big Circulation of Notes Slashed

BY ROBERT SAGE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Reabsorption of 70 billion francs [1 billion 400 million dollars] or more than 9 per cent of France's bloated banknote circulation between last October and the end of the year is reported in the first Bank of France statement since the liberation, which will be made public soon.

A further shrinkage of 240 million dollars is expected to be announced soon, bringing fiduciary circulation from a peak of 12 billion 840 million dollars to 11 billion 200 millions.

Advances to State Repaid.

This improvement in the internal financial situation was attributed to the recent successful liberation loan, which brought 3 billion 280 million dollars into the treasury.

The last occupation statement, published July 13, 1940, showed the Bank of France's advances to the state were 1 billion 403 million dollars. The new statement, which will be dated Dec. 28, will announce these advances all have been paid back. Since the ceiling on the bank's advances to the state is fixed at 2 billion dollars, the treasury has at its disposal a reserve fund of this amount for use as required.

Belgian Deposit Stolen.

The new statement will show that deposits remain at $1,691,940,000.

One unfavorable report in the statement is the fact that the Bank of France recently has been obliged to restore 10 billion gold francs which the National Bank of Belgium placed in its vaults for safekeeping at the beginning of the war and which was stolen by the Germans during the occupation. This transaction offers a serious bookkeeping problem which has not been solved.

LEHMAN ASSET VALUE RISES TO $44.28 A SHARE

Lehman corporation reported to its stockholders yesterday a net asset value of $44.28 a share as of Dec. 31, 1944, compared with $41.55 on June 30, 1944, and $37.71 on Dec. 31, 1943.

The report, covering the first six months of the corporation's fiscal year, showed that public utility securities continued the largest concentration of investment in the portfolio. On Dec. 31 these securities had a market value of $13,445,836. Second largest were oil holdings, with a market value of $10,271,619, and third largest were securities of merchandising companies, with a market value of $8,404,200.

Forty thousand shares of General Motors common constituted the corporation's largest single investment, valued at $2,560,000. In the six month period the corporation added to its portfolio the securities of a number of metal and mining companies.

AETNA CASUALTY BOARD PROPOSES STOCK DIVIDEND

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Directors of Aetna Casualty and Surety company have voted to recommend to stockholders that capital be increased to 6 million dollars from 3 million, it was announced today.

The board also recommended the increased capital stock be paid for by transfer of 3 million dollars from surplus account to capital stock account and that directors be authorized to declare a dividend in stock of one share for each share held.

Directors proposed a dividend rate on the new stock of $2.50 a year, but said decision on further distributions would be considered at the close of each year. The dividend in stock, if authorized at the annual meeting Feb. 13, will be payable March 1 to holders of record Feb. 17.

Reliance Electric Sales Set Record; Profit Rises

Record sales and increased profit were reported yesterday by Reliance Electric and Engineering company, Cleveland, O., for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31. Sales rose $500,000 to a total of $17,876,935. Net income was $540,522 compared with $409,305 the preceding year.

WON'T PAY HIGH PRICE FOR CAR, OWNERS ASSERT

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 7 (AP).—Announcing the results of a nationwide survey of car owners, R. L. Polk & Co. reported today that 76 per cent of owners declare they will not buy new automobiles if the retail selling price is 25 to 30 per cent higher than pre-war levels. In contrast, 53 per cent of automobile dealers polled asserted price increases will have "very little effect" on the post-war new car market.

R. L. Polk & Co. for many years has been statistician for the industry. The answers in the survey just completed were obtained from 30,000 car owners and 10,000 dealers, representing every make and year model car on the market.

SALES IN RETAIL STORES UP 9 PCT. FOR NOVEMBER

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—Unprecedented Christmas buying pushed November retail store sales to 6 billion 136 million dollars, a 9 per cent increase over November, 1943, the commerce department said today.

About 3 per cent of the increase was caused by higher prices, the department said. It attributed the other 6 per cent to fear of shortages, postoffice pleas for early mailing, and high war time incomes.

Department store sales rose 16 per cent, apparel stores 14 per cent, and liquor store sales 30 per cent, due principally to more abundant supplies than a year ago, the department said. Jewelry stores registered a fractional decline.

Sol Lesser Forms New Motion Picture Company

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 7 (AP).—Organization of Sol Lesser Productions, Inc., for production of motion pictures and stage plays, was announced today. Capitalized at 1 million dollars, it plans expenditure of more than 5 million during 1945, said Lesser, who is president. Louis R. Lurie of San Francisco is vice president. Directors include Jean Hersholt, actor.

Predict Gains in 1st Quarter Car Loadings

Freight car loadings of the 28 principal commodities in the first quarter of this year are expected to total 8,787,396 cars compared with 8,768,854 car loadings of the same commodities a year ago, the 13 district shippers' advisory boards estimated yesterday.

Six of the boards predicted decreases, but these were more than offset by increases forecast by the other seven. Among these were the Great Lakes and midwest districts. Larger loadings were predicted for 14 commodities, decreases for a similar number.

Fresh Fruit Gain 20 Per Cent.

Among the commodities for which increases were forecast and the per cent of gain were fresh fruits other than citrus 20.2, agricultural implements and vehicles other than automobile, 13.2, canned goods 8, manufactures and miscellaneous 5.7, ore 5.3, paper, paperboard, and prepared roofing 5.3, fresh vegetables other than potatoes 3.8, salt 3.6, citrus fruits 3.1, and cotton seed and its products except oil 3.

Among declines predicted were live stock 8.2, gravel, sand, and stone 7.3, brick and clay products 7.2, petroleum and petroleum products 6.7, hay, straw, and alfalfa 6.3, lumber and forest products 6, potatoes 5.9, and cement 5.1.

FAKE OFFICER FLASHES BADGE ON A REAL ONE

Morris Estes, 33 of 157 Eugenie st., admitted at the police showup yesterday that it was the wrong thing to go around trying to impress people with a fake detective badge. Especially when the person is a real detective.

Estes was arrested Saturday in a tavern at 154 North av. by Detective Herman Schert of the Hudson Av. station after Estes, who had been nudged accidentally by the detective's elbow, told him:

"You can't push me around. I'll have you arrested—I'm a detective." Then he flipped back his coat lapel and showed the phony badge to Schert.

Police said Estes had served time for robbery in Stateville penitentiary.

Big Ben Kept on Time by Weight of a Penny

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 7.—A penny keeps London's famous Big Ben ticking on time, Royal Astronomer Harold Spencer Jones disclosed today. He said a penny is either added or taken from a tray of weights fixed to the huge clock's 13 foot 600 pound pendulum, and that this minute change causes a gain or loss of 2/100 of a second a day. This, he said, often is enough to rectify any error.
